REVEAL NOTES TO "GRACIE"

"I'm Never Happy Unless I'm with you," Williams Wrote Music Teacher.

LETTERS WERE "BYRONIC"

Revelation after revelation, following in astounding succession, today disclose the fact that George E. Williams, the Braintree "millionaire," whose swindling operations have been estimated as high as $900,000, was also involved in passionate love-making with not less than four women.

Besides his legal wife, three "affinities" have so far come to light. The investigators are not sure today that these are all. While Williams maintained four distinct establishments at Plymouth for an alleged "Mrs. Williams," he appears also to have had another at Hough's Neck for Gracie Faust, who sued him for breach of promise, and possibly another in New York for a woman whose name has not yet been made public. His affair with Gracie, it is reported, cost him $20,000 as a result of her suit.

Williams not only wrote insurance, real and fictitious, but went in further for love-letter writing and real life romance. Nothing in the realm of amatory prose and poetry appears to have escaped his attention. His love letters are Byronic in their intensity, and breathe spirit—which some times appears also to have been, like his vast wealth, stolen—of the bards of passion of all time.

"Dear, Darling Gracie."

"My dear, darling Gracie," "too tender a creature for troubles," "tender ties, close-twined with the fibres of the heart," and "love and happiness like twin fares on a golden coin," are a few phrases he used. Excerpts from the love epistles of the sentimental Williams to his "Dear, darling Gracie" are given out by Attorney Herbert A. Keaney, bail commissioner and a member of the law firm of Day, Daly & Keaney at No. 46 Cornhill. He said:

"These letters have always seemed to me a sort of literary curiosity and interested me long before Williams' status in the community was called into question. Of course, I realize that the validity of the correspondence has never been established before any court, and for that reason I should hesitate to quote anything from such copies as I have that would do any injury to anyone in the community, through the revealing of names, dates or places."

"My Own Truly One."

He then gave a part of the text of the "Dear, darling Gracie" letter as follows:

I am delighted beyond measure that you have fitted out the cottage at Hough's Neck. I have long desired to look upon the sea with you. I want to hear the sound of the waves upon the shore with you at my side. The storm and stress of business no affects me that I think of you, my own lovely one, as a safe harbor from the avarice and the mercenary madness of this weird world.

I am never happy until I am with you. You are too tender a creature for me to disclose to you the troubles that come to my mind like a troop of cavalry. Do you ask me to paint a picture of love? Oh, that love could fulfil its wishes. We would have no tales that were not tales of love, no book that

GIRL SLAIN BY PASTOR

Anna Aumuller, identified as the victim in the celebrated New Jersey headless body river mystery. The girl was killed by Rev. Hans Schmidt while she was asleep in an apartment at No. 68 Bradhurst avenue, the Bronx, where she and the priest had lived together. Schmidt cut her body up in the flat and carted it in sections to the Hudson River.

Mayor Welcomes Electrical Men

The International Convention of the A. F. of L. Brotherhood of Electrical Workers' Union today began its deliberations in Faneuil Hall. All the international officers and every delegate reported.

Mayor Fitzgerald opened the convention. Miss Annie E. Malley of the Boston Telephone Operators' Union, presided over part of the welcoming session.

This week the delegates will visit the navy yard and will accept an invitation to visit at Nahant, and an invitation extended by the New England Telephone & Telegraph Company to visit some of its new telephone exchanges.

'Army Best in World,' Declares Garrison

WASHINGTON, Sept. 15.—"The United States army is in first-class condition. It was never better trained nor more able to handle any emergency." This was the statement made by Secretary of War Garrison on his return today from a tour of inspection of practically every post in the country.

Found Dead in Lodging House

A lodger registered at the Merrill House, No. 17 Cambridge street, as "C. Urson," was found dead early today. Associate Medical Examiner Richardson pronounced death due to natural causes. The dead man was about fifty-five years of age, of light complexion, and wore a brown suit with a blue golf cap and russet shoes.

German Olympic Men at Harvard

Harvard College was visited today by the German Olympic commissioners who are in this country studying athletics and getting points for the Olympic meet in Germany next year. The party consisted of Herr Karl Behn, Lieutenant Von Reichman, Dr. Reformin Berner and Joseph Wattenn. Mayor Fitzgerald entertained the guests at Young's Hotel after they had returned from Cambridge.

SUSPECT PASTOR SLEW 2 GIRLS

BURIED INFANT ALIVE

Police Dig for Baby Born to Curate Schmidt's Girl Victim.

KELLNER CASE SUSPECT

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—Coroner Feinberg today learned that twenty-two-year-old Anna Aumuller, the girl who was murdered and whose torso was found in the Hudson river, had given birth to a child before she was murdered and her body dismembered by Hans Schmidt, the thirty-two-year-old curate she is in jail here.

Investigation by Feinberg today convinced him that a child had been born to the girl before Schmidt slew her on September 2 in the little flat that he had rented for her.

Believe Baby Burned Alive.

The authorities believe that Schmidt buried the baby alive and today began digging in the neighborhood of the flat where the girl was murdered in the hope of finding the baby's body.

Schmidt, in his cell today, was calm and defiant. He refused to see reporters and when one of them sent a note to him requesting an interview, Schmidt sent back the following reply:

"I do not think you will understand me. There is no use talking about it."

Suspicion that Schmidt killed nine-year-old Alma Kellner, whose body was found buried in quicklime in the basement of St. John's Catholic Church, Louisville, Ky., two and a half years ago, has been aroused. From August, 1909, till March, 1910, Schmidt was a visitor in Louisville, not officially connected with any church there but a guest of Rev. Henry B. Westerman rector of

Compensation Law Helps Wife Only

Supreme Court Ruling, Handed Down Today, Defines Act.

The wife but not the children is entitled to compensation under the Workmen's Compensation act, according to a decision handed down today by the full bench of the Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts.

Mrs. Annie McNicol, wife of Stuart McNicol, and his daughter, Josephine, who is under eighteen years of age, asked for compensation for the death of Mr. McNicol, who was killed as the result of an assault made on him by Timothy McCarthy, who was intoxicated, and while both were working at the Bowdoin tunnel docks.

The court found that McCarthy was in an "intoxicated frenzy of passion." This condition was known to Mathews, the foreman on the job. The widow and daughter filed their claims. The Industrial Accident Boards found that both widow and daughter were entitled to compensation. This was reversed by the full bench, which decided that only the widow should get the compensation of $7.50 a week for 300 weeks. McNicol was paid $15 weekly.

Mme. Curie Predicts New Radium Cures

Says Dr. Rutherford Will Aid Mankind with Fresh Marvels.

BIRMINGHAM, Eng., Sept. 15. Madame Curie predicting today that still greater marvels will result from her discovery of radium.

She says that Dr. Rutherford, professor of physics at Liverpool University, is the one man who promises to confirm mankind inestimable boons from radium.

Decatur's Books Found Correct

Adjutant-General Pearson today said he had not received a request from Company E of the Naval Brigade for an investigation of the books of the company to ascertain what has become of $1,000 due to the members for their annual tour of duty at sea last Summer. "I have been told by Captain Daniel M. Goodrich, commander of the Naval Brigade, however, that the accounts are correct and that there is no basis for the reports concerning Lieutenant Stephen Decatur," he said.

SWIFT SUIT UPON LYNN ICE TRUST

Attorney-General Brings Test Case Against Seven Ice Companies.

17 OFFICIALS ACCUSED

Attorney-General Swift today filed a bill in equity against seven ice companies of Lynn, alleging they are a combination in restraint of trade as a trust and asking for a dissolution. The case will serve as a test of the value of the existing law regarding restraint of trade and combinations. This is the first ice case to be presented by the Attorney-General.

The following statement was issued today by the Attorney-General:

Other Cities Affected.

After careful consideration and investigation of the facts concerning the ice situation in certain localities where some evidences appeared of agreements or combination, particularly in Boston and its suburbs, Cambridge, Somerville, Malden, Worcester, Springfield, New Bedford, Fall River, Lawrence, Quincy, Melrose and Lynn, I have concluded that the Lynn situation offers the best opportunity to test the value of the law of this Commonwealth in regard to restraint of trades and combination.

I therefore, filed today, a bill in equity against the North Shore Ice Delivery Company, Lynn Ice Company, Coolidge Ice Company, Independent Ice Company, Z. J. Chase Ice Company, Glenmere Ice Company and the Brown Point Ice Company, and the officers of these various concerns, doing business in the city of Lynn, asking for the dissolution of the combination and of The North Shore Ice Delivery Company as a corporation and an injunction against their carrying out a contract entered into among them, and for other necessary relief to restore the ice business in Lynn to a lawful basis.

The presence of other work in the department has made it necessary to have additional counsel so that this case may be pushed to a conclusion as rapidly as possible. I have engaged Lee M. Friedman, Esq., of Boston, who has made a special study of this branch of the law, to act as special counsel in the prosecution of the case.

The Defendants.

The complaint charges that on or about April 1, 1913, an agreement was entered into between the companies. The contract provides that all of the ice produced by the companies shall be sold to the North Shore Ice Delivery Company for $10 per ton.

The defendants are Mial W. Chase, Charles L. Chase, George M. Chase, Edward E. Chase, Julius L. Sloan, Henry E. Fleming, Howard C. Fleming of Lynn, Ira D. Urquhart, William G. Colman of Peabody, George H. Stackpole, William A. Shaw, Wilbur A. Coolidge, Frank G. Gould, Hiram Miller, Dennis F. Scanlon and Albert Wyer of Lynn.

Thaw Tells Dick Sears Mack Will Beat McGraw Men

Who will win the pennant! Who, Philadelphia, of course. Look at New York. Marquard has blown up and Christy can't do it all. McGraw has a team of cheap players. They think McGraw a great manager, but Connie Mack has not his brains, and will win the world's pennant, not by his pitchers, but by a great infield.

Who is leading in the batting now? Saul is Wagner up to 300 yet? He had a slump. There is a great player for an old man, with his legs giving out. He is the greatest player in the game. Of course I must not forget Ty Cobb. He is sure some player, tho he caught Jacks son yet!

Houston Writes to 50,000 Farm Women

Wants Them to Tell Him How Government Can Help.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 15.—David F. Houston, Secretary of Agriculture, wants the women on American farms to tell him what the Department of Agriculture can do to best serve their needs. Accordingly he has prepared a letter which will be sent to the women of 50,000 farm households, requesting them to make suggestions.

Copies of the letter will go to about twenty farms in each of the 2,800 counties in the United States. Secretary Houston says that the replies received will represent the views and opinions of more than 500,000 farm women.

GUARD IS WATCHED BY HIGH SHERIFF

Prisoner Defiant as Federal Habeas Corpus Writ Arrives at Colebrook.

"SAFE WITH UNCLE SAM"

COLEBROOK, N. H., Sept. 15. On a warning of treachery in the Thaw camp the authorities redoubled their vigilance today over Harry K. Thaw.

There was a sinister report at first that one of Thaw's guards had been holding himself open to an offer from the Jerome forces. The report was brought to Sheriff Glen Potter. Four Sheriff promptly proceeded to make any undermanded act, by his own reasoning out of them.

Meanwhile Thaw himself is jubilant over the arrival of the federal writ and defiant of Jerome or anybody else to "rail him" now.

United States Marshal G. P. Nute arrived with the federal writ of habeas corpus.

The court is informally at Littleton at 11 o'clock tomorrow morning. Jerome in the hope that the writ will be vacated by United States Judge Edgar Aldrich, has sent Governor Dunlap Parker will grant extradition the first day at Concord, remained today his plans to snatch Thaw did not tell of lovers. At evening we might sit side by side and wonder what star would become our home when love became immortal.

WILLIAMS PENNED ARDENT LOVE NOTES

The "Dear Pet" Letter.

Williams met Gracie Faust, it is claimed, on a train between Quincy and Boston, posing as a single man. Not long after the meeting, the girl, a music teacher, became mistress of a cottage at Hyngo's Neck, where the neighbor's saw Williams as a frequent visitor.

A second letter, commencing "Dear Pet," read in part:

Some persons pronounce the very word "love" with a sneering drawling tone of voice. They call it sickish, silly, sentimental nonsense and all that, but, dear Gracie, notice it wherever and whenever you will those persons are generally in one of three different classes, either they were disappointed old maids or bachelors who once wanted to love somebody, and tried it, but did not succeed to their heart's satisfaction; or they were sordid, hardened, miserly skinflints whose only idea in life was making money; or they were the so-called intellectuals and strong-minded men and women who sacrificed the better and higher parts of their natures for the exclusive pursuit of some inferior good, to the attainment of which they have devoted their lives.

Broke Into Poetry.

Williams closed this particular passage with these verses:

Oh, the tender ties,
Closely-twisted with the fibres of the heart.
Which, broken, drains the soul of human joy.

And makes it pain to live.

"Just to show the attitude of mind of this lover," went on Mr. Kenny, "and to indicate how well he seems to have combined his peculiar philosophy with his passion, I will give just one bit, which has a sort of familiar sound to my ears, although I cannot say where I have heard the like of it before." He read:

All healthy, right-minded and normally constituted people know the passion of love. They know too well that love is the very life blood of happiness and constitutes the native element in which it lives. They know that what the air is to the lungs, love is to the life of the heart. They know that this delightful compound of sentiment and feeling enters into the best, the highest, the deepest and purest joy on earth. I know, dear Gracie, that in its lowest form love is hardly more than simple passion. But it does not stay there long. It goes up into the region of sentiment and thereby becomes aesthetic in nature. It next lays a strong hold upon the imagination, and through this door enters the heart.

Sued by Miss Faust.

It is intimated that some of these letters may have been prologues or preambles to excuses offered by Williams to Miss Faust to explain his "business" absences, when he was possibly keeping engagements with other women.

The Faust breach of promise suit was filed against Williams about ten years ago. When it came up for trial, Williams appeared in court with his lawyer, but was apparently exonerated by the failure of the plaintiff to appear. The settlement is said to have cost the man $20,000. He wished to appear as an innocent man who was being blackmailed. Many believe Miss Faust is the woman who really broke Williams' heart.

Miss Faust had placed her case in the hands of Peter J. Daly of Canton, now a member of the Governor's staff, who disappeared. When Attorney Daly found he had been "triumbed," as the lawyers expressed it, the evidence was put to a suit with the declaration, where it still remains.

Vesuvius' Heart Found to Be Over 626 Degrees Hot

NAPLES, Sept. 15.—In their recent descent of the crater of Vesuvius, Professor Malladra and his two companions reached a depth of 1,200 feet, constituting a record for such an enterprise. They spent an hour in making scientific experiments on the brink of the great funnel at the bottom of the crater. The funnel, which is 500 feet in diameter, was created by the sudden subsidence of the old crater floor last month.

The explorers found the funnel to be an enormous fiery cavern. They lost their thermometers, the steel rope on which they were suspended becoming fused by the acids and the terrific heat. However, they had obtained a registered temperature of 626 degrees Fahrenheit before the mishap.

Took Messina, N. Y., Car to Reach Italy

But Homesick Lads Are Quickly Routed From Freight Train.

Dominick Domino and Joseph Porchenata, young Italians homesick for "Sunny It," were routed from a freight car in the South Boston yards of the New Haven road today, and were arrested for trespass.

When asked what they were doing in a freight car, if they wanted to go back to Italy, they insistently pointed to a label on the side of the car. The label read:

"MESSINA."

Dominick and Joseph thought they would go somehow back to their native home. They never knew of Messina N. Y., where the car was bound.

Gardner to Talk on Railroad Problem

Representative A. P. Gardner and his staff of campaign speakers left early today on a five-day automobile trip to the western part of the State in the interests of Mr. Gardner's candidacy for the Republican gubernatorial nomination. Stops are scheduled at Leominster, Fitchburg, Gardner, Athol, Orange, Turner's Falls and Greenfield. Mr. Gardner delivers his principal speech at Greenfield, where his remarks will deal with the railroad situation.

A Tremont Temple rally is scheduled for Saturday night. Mr. Gardner also hopes to be back in Boston in time to attend several rallies here Friday evening.

Garland Back from Smuggling Search

Assistant United States District Attorney Garland and Special United States Treasury Agent Carl Chandler, in charge of the Boston office, were back at their desks today after a six weeks' trip to France in connection with the smuggling at the port of Boston, the investigation of which last Spring resulted in the arrest of Mary H. Dolan, Mr. and Mrs. Terrence L. Shevlin and others. Shevlin was a clerk in the customs service in this city. It is understood that a great deal was gleaned as to the methods of the alleged smugglers.

Newport Matrons in Swimming Race

NEWPORT, Sept. 15.—Mrs. R. Livingston Beekman and Mrs. Norman De R. Whitehouse swam from Hazards to Bailey's Beach. Mrs. Beekman won the race of about a mile by fifty yards, and finished within a few seconds of an hour. As they were rounding Henry Clews' estate, Mrs. Joseph Harriman joined in the race, accompanying them to Bailey's Beach.

Rivadavia Made Run of 22.48 Knots

ROCKLAND, Me., Sept. 15.—Official announcement that the new Argentine battleship Rivadavia, here for her official builder's acceptance trials, did not complete her standardization runs last night, owing to darkness, was sent ashore today by President Francis T. Bowles of the Fore River Shipbuilding Corporation. Unofficially it was stated the superdreadnought made 22.48 knots on one run over the mile course. Her contract calls for an average of 22½ knots. The ship went on to the course again today.

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—Immediately after the funeral of the late Mayor William J. Gaynor, Monday, a public fund will be begun to erect a monument to the memory of the dead executive, it was learned today. The board of governors of the New York Stock Exchange today voted to keep the exchange closed until noon on the day of the funeral.

BACKACHE IS A DANGER SIGNAL

Kidney Troubles, Bladder Disorders, Rheumatism, and Serious Diseases Follow.

There are other symptoms, such as pains in the region of the kidneys, nervousness, dizziness, tired and wornout feeling, weak bladder, or urinary troubles, which are just as dangerous, for the slightest kidney derangement if neglected may develop into the deadly Bright's disease, dropsy or diabetes.

It is not only dangerous, but needless, for you to suffer and endure the tortures of these troubles, for Uroxone promptly ends all such misery.

There is no more effective remedy for kidney, bladder trouble and rheumatism, than Uroxone, because it reaches the cause. It soaks right into the kidneys, through the walls and linings, cleans out the clogged up pores, neutralizes and dissolves the poisonous uric acid and waste matter, that lodge in the joints and muscles and cause those terrible rheumatic pains, and makes the kidneys filter the poisons from the blood and drives it out of the system.

Three doses of Uroxone a day for a few days is often all that is ever needed to relieve the worst backache or overcome disagreeable urinary disorders.

You will find Uroxone different from other remedies, for it is so prepared that it is practically impossible to take it without results. An original package of Uroxone costs but a trifle, and all druggists are authorized to return the purchase price if it should fail in a single case.—Adv.

NEW HAVEN IS SPLIT INTO TWO BIG DIVISIONS

Effective today, the New Haven road will be operated in two grand divisions, viz., the Western Grand Division, comprising all the lines west of New London and Willimantic, which includes the Midland, Western and present Shore Line divisions, and the Eastern Grand Division, comprising the Boston, Providence and Old Colony divisions.

The present Shore Line Division is divided and a new division covering the main line west of this city and the Danbury and New Canaan branches, is created; it will be known as the New York Division and its headquarters will be at Harlem River. The Shore Line Division will cover the lines between New Haven and New London, including the Northampton branch. These changes, were announced officially today, as were the following changes in the personnel of operating officials:

Woodward in Charge Here.

John A. Droege, formerly superintendent of the Shore Line Division, is made general superintendent in charge of operation of the Western Grand Division, with offices at New Haven.

Clayton N. Woodward, who has been general superintendent of the company, is made general superintendent in charge of the Eastern Grand Division, with office at South Station.

The office of master of transportation is abolished and James O. Halliday, who held that title, is appointed as assistant to the general manager with offices in New Haven, his duties to be assigned.

Charles H. Motsett, who has been freight trainmaster, is made superintendent of the New York Division, with offices at Harlem River.

William H. Hooker, who was superintendent of the Old Colony division, is made superintendent of the Shore line, with offices in New Haven.

Harry C. Oviatt, who was assistant mechanical superintendent of the company, is made superintendent of the Old Colony division.

Many Other Changes.

These changes have resulted in a number of minor promotions and changes, including the appointment of Donald F. Stevens, son of John F. Stevens, former vice-president of the road, to the position of trainmaster at Harlem River, succeeding Motsett; John Flick, assistant trainmaster, takes the place of Stevens as trainmaster of the third division of the Shore line; Master Mechanic C. J. Stewart, of Boston, becomes assistant mechanical superintendent, succeeding Oviatt, and Master Mechanic C. A. Moriarty of Providence takes Stewart's place.

In announcing these changes, which the company refers to as having been "foreshadowed in a recent statement made by President Howard Elliott," the company says:

"The management of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad believes that the above changes with others to follow will strengthen and improve its service and that by reason of the increased supervision to be exercised by superintendents as a result of these changes, safety and efficiency in operation will be greatly improved."

Tennessee Greets Veterans of G. A. R.

CHATTANOGA, Tenn., Sept. 15.—A week of activity began today at the meeting of the Union veterans who are here for the forty-seventh annual encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic. The aged men who fought against the South fifty years ago were welcomed by the people of Chattanooga today. It was the first time so large a body of Union soldiers had entered the Southland on a peaceful mission. Thousands of veterans were quartered in private homes in the city today. This was officially "Lookout Mountain Day" on the encampment program.

Move Against Big Coal Concerns

CHICAGO, Sept. 15.—Involuntary petitions in bankruptcy were filed in the Federal Court here today against three companies affiliated with the O'dara Coal Company, the $5,000,000 concern that went into the hands of a receiver Saturday. The three companies named in the petitions filed today were charged with liabilities in excess of $1,000,000. The alleged insolvent companies are the Middle States Coal Company, the Imperial Mining Company, the Virgin Collieries Company.

Tango Must Go, Says Archbishop Quigley

CHICAGO, Sept. 15.—Archbishop Quigley, head of the Roman Catholic diocese of Chicago, has declared in letters just sent to the pastors of parishes in his jurisdiction that the "tango" must go. Dean Sumner of the Episcopal Cathedral of SS. Peter and Paul has also taken measures to try to stamp out the new dance.

'Most Beautiful Boy in World,' Is Here

Has Been Brought Up Under Enchantment of Music.

Staffan Kronberg, called "the most beautiful boy in the world," is staying for a few days at the Copley Plaza with Mrs. Katherine Tingley, the theosophist. The boy has been sent her by the father, Julius Kronberg, Sweden's royal artist.

Staffan is just ten years old. He has already been trained in theosophy by his parents. They hope to give him a larger training at Point Loma, California.

Mrs. Tingley maintains that the boy is the most beautiful boy in the world. His beauty does not consist in his face merely, but in his whole makeup.

Mrs. Tingley says of Staffan:

"This is the child of the new generation. He is the most beautiful because every element in his nature is contributing towards his beauty. This child has already been brought up under the enchantment of music."

Engineer Miller Pleads Not Guilty

NEW HAVEN, Ct., Sept. 15.—A. B. Miller, engineer on the White Mountain express which ran into the Bar Harbor express September 2, and as a result of which twenty-one persons lost, was brought before the special term of the Superior Court today on a bench warrant charging manslaughter. He pleaded not guilty and his bond of $5,000, furnished by F. H. Gates, secretary and treasurer of the New Haven branch of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Engineers, was renewed.

President at Desk Again Tomorrow

WINDSOR, Vt., Sept. 15.—Invigorated by three days of typical mountain Fall weather, President Wilson left Cornish for Washington this afternoon, and will be at his desk early tomorrow. Dr. Cary Grayson accompanied him.

Mrs. Wilson and the three Wilson daughters probably will not return to Washington before November 1.

HARRY FEELS SAFE IN CUSTODY OF U. S.

back to Matteawan the moment an extradition warrant is signed.

Marshal Nute was not expected until early afternoon, but he arrived at midafternoon. "The Federal writ which no brought put Thaw, for the first time in his sensational career, in the hands of the United States government. The writ directs that Marshal Nute be given custody of Thaw, Jolutiy with Sheriff Drew of Coos County, and that Thaw be produced at Littleton tomorrow morning before Judge Aldrich in the United States District Court.

Safe With Uncle Sam.

When Thaw learned of the marshal's arrival he was more fickled than he has been since the day Jerome was arrested for gambling up in Coaticook.

"Neither William T. Jerome," declared Thaw, "nor anyone else can railroad me while Uncle Sam is about."

Thaw was so easy in his mind, after the writ came, that he ceased to worry about court procedures, and chatted about his flight from Matteawan, his deportation from Canada and his sensational auto and motorcycle rides.

It is reported that Moses Grossman, chief counsel in New Hampshire for Thaw, will ask as the habeas corpus hearing at Littleton tomorrow that the hearing be continued until later in the week.

This would give them the restraining protection of the writ until after the extradition hearing before Governor Felker.

Jerome is prepared to fight any continuance bitterly. He will represent to Judge Aldrich—in his capacity as special deputy from the New York Attorney General's office—that the federal court has no right to anticipate the action of the Governor, by restraining the machinations of Thaw from delivering Thaw to another custody, since no court order would be necessary after the Governor disposed of the case.

Jerome desires the federal writ to be vacated immediately, so he will have a clear path in his fight to get Thaw extradited.

Jerome, while wrathful against Grossman for having the federal writ taken out, admitted in a way that he would have to keep moving to defeat Grossman.

"I've got to put that fellow over the jumps," said Jerome, speaking of Grossman, "and I've got to do the putting quick."

Jerome calls Grossman "The Mouse," because the New Hampshire attorney is small physically. He asserted that Grossman was practically in contempt of the federal court because Grossman insisted he was using the writ "as a form of protection" for Thaw.

After "The Mouse."

"The mouse is going to get caught this time," said Jerome.

Personal animosity has arisen between Jerome and Grossman. They have not been speaking when they passed in the Monadnock House lobby or corridors.

A new point was brought up today by the Jerome camp against the federal writ. The right of federal jurisdiction was questioned. The Jerome camp said that federal courts have jurisdiction only on interstate affairs. This raised a question of the precise nature of the Grossman writ. Grossman will claim Thaw is a native of Pennsylvania, who is making a battle in New Hampshire against being extradited to New York. Jerome will argue that the writ simply relates to the New Hampshire end of the case, and, therefore, it is not an interstate matter.

Thaw slept later than usual today. Warm sunshine shone into his room and he was ready, right after breakfast, to go out. Accompanied by Sheriff Drew and Deputy Sheriff Stiles, Harry went to the barber shop for his morning shave.

It is announced that Governor Felker will grant a hearing on the matter of extradition in Concord Wednesday, probably in the afternoon. This word was received by both Mr. Jerome and Thaw's counsel.

In one of his self-written interviews Thaw described his flight back and forth across northern Vermont and New Hampshire in an automobile with reporters, after he had been dumped over the Canadian border by the Dominion immigration officials. Thaw denied that he told everyone who he was, but said the reporters, telephoning from every available point, shouted his name all around. Thaw said the Dominion Minister of Justice, who ordered his deportation, acted like a "chinese blackmailer."

The "compliment warrant" Thaw styled "false and disreputable."

He ended his "interview" by disposing of Jerome as his "unbinning is much."

"The person we have to fear," Thaw wrote, "is the attorney for the unnamed friends of Stanford White, for he this attorney is an extremely shrewd man."

Harry was introduced to the island rock House to Mr. and Mrs. George P. Moses. When Mrs. Moses started to go she said impulsively:

"Oh, Mr. Thaw, why didn't you go through the DIXIE Notch and escape?"

Harry put the fingers, tip to tip, and replied:

"Geography is a great study, you know. I wish I had put more time on it than I did."

Thaw Still a Favorite.

Popular feeling here continues for Thaw and against Jerome.

Jerome often entertains the reporters and newspeople by legal yarns, one out of his long metropolitan experiences. Then he makes bitter fun of his Coaticook troubles, the indictment of the Canadian "Procureur-General" and of others at Coaticook made the audience laugh loudly.

But, when Jerome ceased and walked back into the hotels some of the Vermonters, who had laughed loudest, condemned Jerome. One man said:

"A lot of cheap talk Jerome is the biggest bob-tail artist I ever saw. He is chin to chin with Gaynor."

Though many Colebrook people class Jerome as a tryant, Jerome has been heard to allude to Thaw as "the poor fellow."

A report came from Coaticook today that Wilfred Aldrich, who brought the gambling complaint upon which Jerome was arrested, has received several checks, totally a considerable amount. One of these checks is said to be from a Colebrook woman, who wrote Aldrich an urgent letter to press the charge against Jerome. If possible.

DICK SEARS' STORY OF DAY WITH THAW

This is the story of Harry Thaw's day, as seen by Dick Sears, the Boston AMERICAN'S photographer, who is at Colebrook.

COLEBROOK, Sept. 15.—There was nothing doing today, and Harry was alone most of the time, so when the Sunday papers arrived I got the AMERICAS and brought it up to him. He was more than pleased.

I spent the afternoon with him, and we got through the paper together.

I said, "How do you like that new photo of Evelyn Thaw in today's Boston AMERICAN? Does it look like her?"

"Bill, it is a very good picture, but you see she has changed since I last saw her," said Thaw.

Ladies, "I see the Canadian immigration people may not let her into Canada."

"Is that so? Well, what does she want to go there for now?"

"Mr. Thaw, don't you think it a sin or shame that theatrical people are sold Evelyn's name for advertising purposes?"

"Well, that is their business, and of course they look out for their interests."

Wagner a Great Player.

Just then he broke in, very much to my surprise, by saying: "Who is leading in the batting now, and is Wagner up to .300 yet? He had a slump. There is a great player for an old man, with his legs giving out. He is the greatest player in the game. Of course I must not forget Ty Cobb, he sure is some player. Has he caught Jackson yet?"

"Well, who is the best pitcher?" I asked.

"Oh, Walter Johnson, of course, and Christy Mathewson next."

"Who will win the pennant?"

"Will Philadelphia, of course."

"And what makes you say that?"

Mack Will Win.

"Look at New York Marquard," said Thaw, "he's blown and Christy can't do it all. McGraw has a team of cheap players. They think McGraw a great manager, but Connie Mack has got him beaten and will win the world's pennant, not by his pitchers, but with a great infield. Coombs and Plank are now going well."

"Well," I said, "maybe Connie Mack is laying back for the series."

"Oh, no; those pitchers have been wrong for two months. I see Marquard got in wrong with Tinker yesterday. He is a 'find,' I see by the papers, for an old man in the game. Lajoie is great. Sears, why did the Red Sox let John Stahl go? I think he was a great manager."

"We could not dope that out yet, but I guess the Red Sox slumping in the last season."

"Yes, but they are a great team, when going right, and they won the World's pennant because they played better ball. How about those muffs of Snodgrass and Merkle?"

That would have given them the pennant."

"Yes, but the Red Sox had won by right at the first."

Saving His Soul.

Sheriff Drew and Mrs. Drew were guarding Thaw tonight for a little while.

I said, "Will Thaw go to church today?" "Not today," he said. "I don't want to parade him through the streets on Sunday."

"Well, as he wants a minister, can't he have one in his room?"

"Well, if Mr. Thaw want to have his soul saved, he can have it here in this room."

I told Thaw about it and he laughed, and said: "Why didn't he tell the truth? I told him I wanted to go, but he says the last time he went to church it was a special service, and if he goes today, he will have to keep it up and get in the habit."

Dramatic Love Story of Harry and Evelyn

CHAPTER XIX.

"And coming events cast their shadows before."—Campbell.

For several months before the departure of Mrs. Mary Copley Thaw to Europe events had been piling up which, had they been known to the Thaw family, would have given them serious alarm for Harry's intentions toward Stanford White.

Whether White had held strictly aloof from Evelyn after her marriage was a point hotly debated through subsequent months.

Evelyn herself, when on the stand as the central witness in what was the most sensational criminal case of the period, testified that, when she was in the honeymoon stage, White saw her twice and spoke to her once. Mrs. Thaw's account of these two episodes was thus:

"I passed Stanford White one day on Fifth avenue (after my marriage). I was in a cab and he saw me. I heard him call 'Evelyn,' just like that (raising her voice).

"I went back to our hotel and told Harry and he said: 'The dirty blackguard! He had no right to speak to you.'

"The next time I saw him I was driving to Dr. Delevan's office to have my throat treated. Stanford White was also in a cab. He just stared at me this time and stroked his mustache. I turned into thirty-third street, off Fifth avenue, and, as I alighted at the doctor's door, I saw Stanford White coming. I rang the bell. The maid came to the door. I got so nervous and flustered that I told the maid that I would come back. I ran down the steps, got into the cab and drove back to the hotel, where Harry was. I told Harry what had happened. He got very excited and bit his nails.

"These were the only two times that Stanford White approached me or attempted to speak to me after my marriage.

Evelyn Hears Call to Footlights.

Early in 1906 rumors came from Pittsburgh of recurrent trouble between Mr. and Mrs. Harry Thaw. There were several reasons advanced. One was Harry's increasing dissipations.

Another was the impossibility of young Mrs. Thaw obtaining recognition from Pittsburgh society.

Another rumor had it that the young wife was harkening again to the call of the footlights. This rumor went so far as to say that Evelyn had told Harry she was going to return to the stage. But, if she had made that declaration, she failed to carry it out.

On the fifteenth of June the Harry Thaws came over from Pittsburgh to New York and took a suite in the Hotel Lorraine. This brought Thaw into the city where the man was living whom Harry held as his unforgivable enemy.

White was not only aware of Harry's enmity, but had been warned against him by friends of the architect. One of these friends was a chorus girl named Agnes Palmer. Early in that month she was ill in the Flower Hospital, recovering from an operation for appendicitis. White, whom she had known and greatly admired for six years, called on her. The girl, who had heard the gossip of the town, said to White:

"Have you heard that Harry Thaw's hatred of you is intense and that he has even threatened your life?"

White laughed and said he knew there was no love lost between him and Thaw, and that he, too, had heard that Thaw was on his trail. White guessed, however, that nothing would happen.

The chorus girl was not satisfied with White's easy view of the situation. She said earnestly:

"Do be careful."

White replied: "Oh, I'm not afraid of Harry Thaw. He'd never hurt anyone."

Thaw Became Erratic.

People at the Hotel Lorraine noticed that Thaw was becoming erratic. He would pester the hotel clerks with confused questions. Owing to his family importance the hotel management sought to satisfy him, but the man's queries and his impatience at not being answered to his suiting caused much embarrassment. Thaw had apparently become insanely jealous of his wife. He went so far as to accuse absolute strangers of being familiar. An extreme instance of this was subsequently related by Burr McIntosh, the artist, actor and traveler, and also a native of Pittsburgh, like Thaw. McIntosh said that Monday afternoon, June 25, Thaw was standing on Thirty-third street, looking into a store window. Standing next to Harry was a stranger, a man named John S. Forgeston, who lived at No. 40 East Thirty-third street.

"Thaw suddenly turned to this stranger," said McIntosh, "and said: 'If you make love to my wife, you blackguard, I'll kill you.'

"Forgeston, not knowing Thaw at all, was naturally amazed. But he took the quickest way to avoid trouble. He walked away."

The hand of Fate moved rapidly as that June 25 progressed.

Stanford White saw his son, Lawrence White, late in the afternoon, then went to the Cafe Martin to dine.

It happened that Harry Thaw was taking his young wife to the Cafe Martin for dinner the same evening.

First the Thaws went to Sherry's. Then they went to the Cafe Martin, where they were joined at a table by Truxton Beale and Thomas McNeely of California, both well known along Broadway.

White and Thaw in Same Cafe.

Soon after the Thaw party was seated Stanford White glanced to enter the same cafe. But he did not stop at the main dining room on the first floor. He passed upstairs to one of the balcony tables. Later he went out.

Mrs. Thaw saw White come in and go out. She leaned forward toward McCaleb and asked him for a pencil. McCaleb did not have one. One of the other men offered a pencil and Mrs. Thaw scribbled a few words on a piece of paper which she passed to her husband.

This brief note, which Mrs. Thaw gave her husband, was later reported to consist of these words:

"THAT DIRTY BLACKGUARD IS HERE."

But no demonstration occurred. White left the balcony eventually and went to the Manhattan Club for a few minutes. From the club he went over to Madison Square Garden. He was bound for the garden on a characteristic evening's pleasure for himself. Theatrical "first night." A new musical show, "Mamselle Champagne," was being produced by Lew Lawrence, the actor-manager on the Madison Square "roof," or open-air floor.

At the roof garden White was in his element, enjoying the opening performance of a brilliant new piece in the very building he had designed with his own clever brain.

Meanwhile Harry Thaw was on his way with his party to see "Mamselle Champagne." He had purchased four tickets that afternoon for the first performance.

Accompanied by his wife and by Messrs. Beale and McCaleb, Thaw entered the roof garden, silent and brooding.

And, reposing in one of Thaw's pockets, was a five-chambered, thirty-eight calibre revolver of blued steel. It was a short barreled, wicked-looking weapon, and every one of the five chambers had been carefully loaded with a ball cartridge.

Was Evelyn Worth Saving?

Was Evelyn Thaw worth saving?

It is an undisputed fact that she was, according to scores of New England people, Gertrude Atherton, the novelist, startled her set by declaring that Evelyn Nesbit Thaw was not worth saving, and by defending Stanford White.

Here are some letters received by the AMERICAN from persons who have decided opinions on this question.

Believes in Charity.

I am one of those women who believe in charity. I defend Evelyn Thaw not because she is a woman, but because she has proven that she has a place in this world. It is not fair to say that she is not worth saving. That is for some higher power to judge. The poor creature is woman happens to be in the limelight and naturally is subjected not only to harsh words but cruel attacks. Certainly she was worth saving and I am glad to see some of that great army of women who stand ready to assist the unfortunate members of our sex.

EVELYN'S FRIEND.

Contrary to Religion.

Christ died to save Evelyn Nesbit Thaw. She was as much his child as any one of us. "Let her who is without sin cast the first stone." I think those women who would cast stones would be few in number. I mean by that few of us are without sin. It is wrong to say that Evelyn Thaw is not worth saving. It is contrary to all religious teachings.

JORDAN MARSH COMPANY

FALL OPENING 1913

Cassidy Exposes Food Dopers' Fear

Mr. Cassidy has long contended that publicity is what is most feared by the food dopers and swindlers. Frequently he has been offered large sums of money if he would only allow the dopers to pay their fines and keep the facts of their dishonest practices from the press. Invariably his answer was to give the dopers more publicity.

The State Board of Health is given the power by statute to have convictions of food dopers printed in the daily press. If they are sincere in their work, why don't they use this power?

By HARRY P. CASSIDY.

I have always maintained that a dishonest food dealer would rather spend thirty days in jail standing on his head than have the facts of his dishonest practices made public.

Secretary Houston of the Department of Agriculture evidently thinks so, too. In lieu of a really effective national food law he has decided to make public, while it is still news, government prosecutions of food swindlers.

Heretofore these prosecutions rarely saw the light of day. Months after the doper paid his fine the only account could be found in governmental food decisions sent to but a few thousand of the ninety millions affected by poisoned food.

As an instance of what the dishonest food dealer prefers: Some weeks ago I found decayed candy was being sold at the confectionery store of Constantine Zevitas, No. 1135 Washington street, corner of Isoyer.

Incontrovertible Evidence.

I appeared in court with incontrovertible evidence against Mr. Zevitas. Health board inspectors were present ready to testify to finding nauseating conditions at the Zevitas factory.

But counsel for Zevitas didn't want witnesses to appear and tell in open court the real conditions of Zevitas' candy business. Zevitas was only too glad to have the evidence quietly told to the judge and pay the fines imposed.

Unless this story had been given publicity by the AMERICAN who would ever have heard of Mr. Zevitas making unwholesome candy and selling it to the little children of the South End?

Another instance: Since the AMERICAN gave publicity to the sale of decayed produce by two produce firms word has gone around the market district that prosecutions will be settled "if you don't tell Cassidy at the AMERICAN."

Heretofore victims of sharp practices who asked their money back have been laughed at. Today these dishonest dealers are afraid. They are more particular about the quality of the goods they sell.

Publicity is a simple expedient and one long criminal manufacturers dread far more than any sort of law. Quiet prosecutions don't bother dealers in impure food products. Public disclosures of their methods is their great fear.

Calls for Publicity.

How many times has the government seized large quantities of their products and condemned them? The dealers have survived. But if the facts of the seizure and condemnation had been made known, like the money changers of old, they would have been driven from the temple of pure food.

Secretary Houston intends to put the buying public on its guard by giving the full facts to the newspapers, not six months or a year after the inspectors found proof of adulteration or impurity, but immediately, while the information is still news, in the full meaning of the word.

By publicity the offending firms will not escape the greater part of their penalty, but will have to face public censure and the inevitable boycott.

If the newspapers of the country will only co-operate by publishing the information, the national law will be strengthened far more than by adding new sections and penalties, and the public will know what to do when a dealer in poisonous foods asks it to buy.

New Prize Contest

BY THE CONTEST EDITOR.

Next Sunday's AMERICAN will contain Picture No. 1 in the new Picture Puzzle Contest.

This new competition is one that should interest every man, woman and child in New England.

It offers $4,000 in cash prizes, as well as a liberal education for those who compete.

The plan of the contest is simple in its scope, but wide. Here it is:

Throughout AMERICAN will start in next Sunday, September 21, a series of picture elevens, one each day and eighty-two in all. Each picture will represent the like of some famous author, boxer, FAT man, poverty, inventor, city, fruit, battle, politician, university or minute man or woman.

The readers of this newspaper who are the most successful in finding the eight-five titles will receive $4,000 in cash offered by the Boston AMERICAN. A glance at the prize list will convince you that this splendid cash offer is meant for you.

1st prize	$1000 in cash
2nd prize	500 in cash
3rd prize	250 in cash
4th prize	150 in cash
5th prize	125 in cash
6th prize	100 in cash
7th prize	75 in cash
8th prize	50 in cash
9th prize	25 in cash
10th prize	10 each
11th—50th prizes	5 each
51st—150th prize	3 each

REMEMBER THIS: THERE WILL BE NO BOOKS TO BUY; NOTHING TO SPEND; EVERYTHING ABSOLUTELY FREE! ANYONE CAN COMPETE!

There may be a more pleasant, entertaining and profitable way of spending your spare time during the crisp Fall evenings, but if there is such a way we know nothing of it.

The competition will be a liberal education. It will afford endless hours of amusement and fascinating diversion to all, both young and old, who compete.

And best of all, the reward is great, the goal $1,000 FOR YOU. Why not have a try for it?

An examination of Schmidt's mental condition was made today by the Tombs physicians. Other examinations will follow as it is believed that Schmidt is mentally unbalanced.

Acting District Attorney Nott today said that any efforts to prove that Schmidt was insane when he killed the girl will be combatted vigorously. Nott declared that the man was sane and that the motive for his action was shown without a doubt.

Attorney Alphonse G. Koehler, who has known Schmidt for two years, visited him in his cell today.

"He seemed unconcerned," Koehler said after his visit with Schmidt. "He seems to have great contempt for any penalty that may be meted out to him.

When I asked him if I could do anything for him he replied:

"No, God and Abraham alone are able to clear up this matter."

"I then asked Schmidt if he thought he was insane or whether there had been insanity in his family," said Koehler. "I also asked him if he wanted to employ an attorney.

"For answer, he said: 'No, I am not insane, and there has been no insanity in my family.' All great men who do acts out of the ordinary are considered insane. There is no suggestion of insanity about me.'

"I understand the predicament I am now in, but I don't need an attorney. Anyway, I don't need one just now. I must wait until God has spoken. God and Abraham will command you to come to me. Don't do anything until that time."

Anna Annuller, the slain girl, came from Austria several years ago. She first kept house for her foster brother, Leger she worked as a housekeeper in a New Jersey home. Her next position was in the St. Boniface parish house, where she met Schmidt. An aunt of the girl often heard Miss Annuller refer to Schmidt. Her attitude to him, however, seemed to be more that of a girl toward a friend than of a girl toward her sweetheart.

Schmidt lost night slept soundly, remorse not troubling his rest.

In the hope of branding Schmidt as an impostor and false priest, church authorities began today a sweeping investigation of Schmidt's career.

"We hope, of course, to be able to prove that this unspeakable monster was an impostor, and that he had been using forged papers," declared Mgr. Lavelle, vicar general of the Archdiocese of New York. "He came to this diocese with credentials which were apparently authentic, but we know practically nothing of him."

He was up early today and looked amply strengthened for the great ordeal of this afternoon—the confrontation of the parts of the beautiful girl, whom he slew to hide his guilt.

This step is necessary for purposes of identification and at its conclusion Coroner Feinberg will confer with Assistant District Attorney Murphy regarding the date for final inquest.

The horror of the crime has stirred New York as no other murder in years. That this man, during the functions of a priest of the church, should steal into the flat he had apparently rented solely for the purpose of killing the girl whom he had married, performing the ceremony himself and put to death the beautiful young Hungarian girl soon to become a mother and then, while her body was yet warm, cut it into six pieces, drain the blood into a bathtub and carry the body piecemeal through one of the principal streets to a ferry, where he consigned it to the river, passes the comprehension of the police and detectives engaged on the case and caused them, inured as they are to all sorts of crime, to shudder as the priest willingly recited all the gruesome details.

The pretentious apartment at No. 68 Bradhurst avenue, not far from the church, was the scene of the murder and it is a remarkable commentary on the selfishness and living-to-self life of New York, that the girl was murdered and cut to pieces without any person of the twenty-four families living in the building having an inkling of the tragedy. It was on the third floor of this building, in a rear four-room flat that the crime was committed on the night of August 31.

There the detectives, headed by Inspector Joseph Faurot, found a butcher's knife, with its two-inch blade as keen as a razor and a carpenter's saw, the implements with which Schmidt confessed he slew and dismembered Anna Annuller, as well as photographs and love-letters which the priest had failed to take away when he cleaned up the flat after the butchery.

Through these the police were led to St. Boniface's rectory and from there, under the direction of Fr. Braun, the parish priest, to St. Joseph's in Harlem, where the capture of the murderer-priest was accomplished.

Curate on Grill.

Schmidt's collapse and confession came the instant he recognized the picture of his victim which the police exhibited to him and realized the meaning of the detectives' presence in the rectory.

The tale of horror and bloodshed that the priest told held even the veteran detectives speechless and aghast. More than once they were on the point of refusing to believe that the priest was telling the truth, but the evidence he offered against himself was too convincing to be denied.

When he had finished the young curate—he is but thirty-two years old—took his rosary to a vacant lot at One Hundred and Forty-fourth street, between Seventh and Eighth avenues, where he had burned the blood-soaked mattress on which Miss Annuller has been murdered and showed them the charred remains of the excelsior and cotton ticking just as he had left them.

The statement of Father Schmidt to Sleeps Soundly and Shows No Remorse Over Dreadful Crime He Confessed.

Chaplain Evers of the Tombs Prison, leads many to the belief that the murderer is unbalanced mentally. In this he tells of being ordained by St. Elizabeth, a nun who has been dead 800 years, and of drinking of the girl's blood as a sacrifice, also under order of St. Elizabeth.

Bishop McFaul of Trenton, under whom Schmidt was stationed for some time, stated that the murdered priest has long been erratic, while others assert that he has been insane for a long time.

THINK CURATE'S ARREST MAY SOLVE MYSTERY OF ALMA KELLNER'S DEATH

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Sept. 15.—Will the real mystery surrounding the assault and brutal murder in December, 1909, of Alma Kellner, nine-year-old student of St. John's Catholic School in this city, be cleared up by the arrest in New York of Rev. Hans Schmidt, the self-confessed murderer of Anna Annuller, whose dismembered body was found in the Hudson River?

This is the question the police are trying to answer today following the receipt of information from New York concerning the fact that Schmidt, the murderer of the Annuller girl, is believed to have been the man who as Rev. John Schmidt acted as assistant rector of St. John's Church here from August, 1909, to March, 1910.

The Kellner girl, daughter of a wealthy family, mysteriously disappeared. For nearly six months an unavailing search was made for her in which Schmidt, the assistant rector, joined. Finally, in May, 1910, about six months after the murder was committed the body of the girl was found buried in the basement of the parochial school.

In the meantime Joseph Wendling, janitor of the school, had disappeared. He was brought back to Louisville in July, 1910, and convicted of the murder, and is serving a life sentence. He has always maintained his innocence, however.

Rev. Father Schuhmann of St. John's Church today admitted that the assistant rector of the church, John Schmidt, who is believed to be Hans Schmidt, was in Louisville at the time the Kellner girl was murdered, but said he was confident that Schmidt had never known the Kellner girl. Wendling, who is in the Frankfort penitentiary, was asked today if he knew Schmidt.

"Never heard of him," he answered.

Wendling, after his conviction, admitted being an accessory after the crime, but declared that he was implicated in the murder only so far as disposing of the body was concerned.

He has steadfastly refused to reveal the name of the actual slayer.

Wife Present by Wire at Silver Wedding Feast

WATCH MEXICO CLOSELY, ORDER TO U. S. ARMY

WASHINGTON, Sept. 15.—Important developments in the Mexican situation are expected this week. It is because of this that President Wilson suddenly decided not to spending his stay at Cornish, N. H., but to return to Washington at once.

Secretary of War Garrison today sent an inquiry to Brigadier-General Bliss, commanding the Texas division of the army, asking detailed statement of the position of his troops, accompanied by a warning to watch the border closely.

Secretary of the Navy Daniels also was in communication with the Atlantic fleet.

No confirmation has been received at the State Department of the reported capture by rebels of 100 American refugees dying from Torreon. The report that Morris P. Rost, nephew of Senator Root of New York, had been shot by the rebels has not been confirmed.

According to San Francisco dispatches Root was intercepted by a few bandits as he was on his way to join employees of the El Tigre company who were preparing to defend mine property at Topia, Mexico. He was disarmed and cut to pieces, according to the report.

Mac Lambert, another American engineer, was badly wounded by bandits.

A. F. of L. Begins Annual Session

Governor Foss Condemned for Attitude in Hyde Park Tangle.

LYNN, Sept. 15.—The twenty-eighth annual convention of the Massachusetts State Branch of A. F. of L. was opened today in American Hall. There were 300 delegates present.

Many minor, more personal matters, including the Telephone Operators, Cigar Makers, Teamsters, Shoemakers' Union and the Laundry Workers' and Sheet Workers' unions.

President Edward A. Allen of Haverhill, Secretary Theodore Morris of Boston, Business Agent Stanley of the Legislative Committee and George E. Mellen of Worcester, for the executive board, presented reports and recommendations. Under the new rule all the reports were referred to the committee.

Governor Foss was condemned by all the officers for his attitude towards organized labor, and especially for his opposition to the employers in the plants employed by him at Hyde Park.

President Allen recommended a plan that no officer of the organization become a candidate or permit his name to be recommended for any political appointive position. He also opposed the formation of a labor party, urged that the delegates vote down all resolutions to organize politically, recommended the abolition of the Federation "legislative committee" and declared that compulsory arbitration should be resisted.

Moose Legend on Flag Is Held Legal

Judge Sullivan of the Municipal Court today set the minds of thousands of Bull Moosers at rest by declaring that the manner in which the legend "Progressive Party" is attached to the American flags in front of scores of Bay State headquarters is perfectly legal. It is by no way a desecration of Old Glory, he informed them, when he saw that instead of being attached to the flag the flag was attached to the legend.

JAIL DANVERS MAN UPON OLD ARSON CHARGE

DANVERS, Sept. 15.—Fred J. Derry, fifty-two, one of the most prominent citizens of the town, was arrested today charged with arson. The authorities charge that he set fire to his barn, located on Hobart street, November 22, 1911. They have been collecting evidence two years.

Derry was arrested by Chief George and taken to Lawrence for arraignment. The Grand Jury returned a secret indictment last week. Derry has engaged James A. White as counsel.

The box factory caught fire at 1.30 a. m. It was damaged to the extent of $14,000, but the insurance companies have decided to settle. Building and stock are fully covered. Evidence of incendiarism is said to have been sufficiently apparent.

Kerosene was found sprinkled in different parts of the building. The patent fire sprinklers had been tampered with. The metallic heads had been substituted by corks sealed with lead.

Derry is married and has a family. He lives on Pine street. He was one of the committee of fifteen citizens of Danvers who handed themselves into a

Mrs. Woodward Ill

NEWPORT, Sept. 15.—Mrs. Woodward, widow of the millionaire banker, James T. Woodward of New York, is reported here seriously ill. Doubts are entertained of her recovery. Mrs. Woodward's son, William married Elsie Cryder, and her sister is Mrs. Lothrop Ames of North Easton and Boston.

BROWN PLEADS NOT GUILTY TO MANSLAUGHTER

Edgar H. Brown, twenty nine, of No. 111 Magnolia street, Dorchester, today pleaded not guilty to the charge of manslaughter in causing the death of his father, Edward W. Brown, sixty-two. Brown was arraigned in the Roxbury District Court and ordered the reading of the warrant. The case was continued until Tuesday, September 23.

Edward Brown died under suspicious circumstances at the home of his son Saturday. The younger man is said to have admitted that with the flat of his hand he pushed his father to the floor but it is also claimed the father had a weak heart, and had complained of feeling ill.

The dead man's widow is said to have told the police that her son grabbed his father by the shoulders and pushed him back on a bed. Young Mrs. Brown is said to have claimed the son struck the father a blow on the jaw that caused him to fall back on the bed. All agree that the father fell back on the bed and then pitched forward, falling on a couch in the room. The mother and Edgar picked Mr. Brown up and placed him on the bed. He died soon afterward.

JIMMY MAGEE OF LOWELL NOSES OUT WILSON FOR NW ENGLAND BATTING HONORS

BOSTON SCHOOL ELEVENS START WORKOUT TODAY

Tackling the curriculum and each other on the gridiron are the two things now on the minds of the schoolboys. The local football season was formally opened Saturday, when Waltham High defeated Marlboro High, and from now till the first of December great activity will be displayed by school athletes.

Many of the schools started preliminary work last week and many more will begin activities this week. The Boston high school teams will all get into action this week.

Waltham, as usual, got the jump on the other schools this season. It can be said, however, that the brand of game displayed by the Watch City eleven was none too good and Coach Harry Dame will have to develop his team a great deal before it can come up to the Waltham team of last year.

Waltham appears to have the makings, for the boys are fast and with more practice should improve. Captain Harold Johnson was the big factor in the game Saturday and his quarterback work, the scoring of Fagan, was an encouraging feature.

It is too early in the season to judge the real quality of a team and Waltham may come strong about.

Suburban Teams Lost Heavily.

The Suburban League teams have nearly all reported for first practice. The prospects are none too bright for developing a team that will equal the Malden or Everett team of last season. All of the teams in this league lost heavily through graduation last June and many new men will have to be developed.

Everett High lost most of its stars of last season. Malden High lost three men players in Butler, Kempton and Wall. The Medford team was well shot to pieces, and at Somerville, Coach Steve Mahoney will have to develop a new set of football men.

Sixty men have reported to Coach Ralph Goodwin Malden High and another Suburban League championship team is expected at this school. Six members of last season's team have returned and are out for their old positions. These are: Captain John Neville, left guard; Fred Rowe, left end; Stanley Wall, left halfback; Norton, who is to play fullback; Fitzpatrick, right halfback, and Walter Rowe, right end. Cronin, who played part of the season last year at halfback, is expected back at school this week and will be out for the team. Jeffries, sub quarter last season, is out to fill Harriet Kempton's shoes, and Stratton is a promising candidate for the centre position.

Fifty-Five Out for Everett.

Coach Chas. O'Donnell of Everett had a squad of fifty-five candidates working out for the team and is plugging hard to fill the places of some of his stars. The loss of George Brickley will be severely felt, and if "Butch" Sacerdote fails to return to school it will be hard to fill his old position. It is expected, however, that Sweetland will report this week.

The Medford High candidates were out Saturday for short practice, but veterans were very few. Practically an entire new team will have to be developed at this school.

Eugene Sullivan, who coached Melrose High in baseball last Spring, has been appointed coach of the football team and a good sized squad is expected to report to him today.

Coach Steve Mahoney of Somerville High has a big squad working for the season. Many of the linemen of last season are back for another year on the gridiron, but a new backfield will have to be developed.

BIG SPORT CARD FEATURES FOR READING FAIR

The detailed program of the annual Reading fair, which will be held under the auspices of the Quannapowitt Agricultural Association, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, September 23, 24 and 25, at the Reading Wakefield fair grounds, indicates that the management of the fair intends to put on the finest big show in its history.

More than $5,000 in purses and trophies will be awarded. Among other features there will be horse races, grangers's prize contest, open baby show, horticultural, agricultural, cattle, poultry, live stock and women's exhibits. Three-mile heat horse races will be held on Tuesday and Wednesday afternoons. More than 250 horses from the Grand Circuit and New England driving clubs have been entered. Thursday afternoon will be devoted to the matinee horses with six half mile races. Running races will enliven the delays between the heats each afternoon.

Old-fashioned plowing and drafting matches and a work horse parade will open the fair on Tuesday morning. Wednesday is "drivers' day" and a horse show, open to all the residents of surrounding communities, as well as Reading and Wakefield, will be held in the morning.

Thursday is Governor's Day. Governor Foss and Lieutenant-Governor Walsh will be guests and will speak in the afternoon. A parade of the prize winners will be held in the morning.

An open baby show, in which physical fitness as well as beauty will count for points, will be a feature, with $200 in cash prizes as an attraction.

Ten granges, namely, Reading, North Reading, Wakefield, Wilmington, Stoneham, Lynnfield, Everett, Saugus and Woburn, will compete for the $500 grangers' prizes. There will also be a special prize women's exhibit in the exhibition hall.

A full military band will play every day. A triple parachute drop will be given by Professor Bonnelli of Boston.

Also a high-class vaudeville bill and a novel "Mardi Gras" midway for the element who tire of the horse races, and a collection of prize cattle, poultry, fruit, flowers and vegetables, gathered from the countryside for miles around; every patron of the fair will get his money's worth.

Arthur H. Jewett is president, Arthur W. Coolidge, secretary, and Henry A. Upton, treasurer of the association in charge of the fair. Herbert C. Brackett has charge of the horse racing entries, which close September 15.

The trotting program will be as follows:

First day—2:22 class, trot, purse $300; 2:21 class, pace, purse $300; 3:00 class, mixed, purse $200.

Second day—2:17 class, pace, purse $300; 2:30 class, trot, purse $300; 2:28 class, pace, purse $300.

FRANK HINKEY WILL ASSIST YALE COACHES

NEW HAVEN, Sept. 15.—Frank Hinkey who has not coached a Yale football eleven for three seasons, has sent word to Captain Henry Ketcham that he would coach here early this week and would remain several days with the Eli team. Hinkey, who was for two years captain at Yale, is one of the most energetic of the veteran coaches and the resident coaching squad is jubilant at the prospect of his advent.

Only the first two practices daily have been given at this week's program, and scrimmaging will be ordered at once.

Word has been received that Cornish, quarterback; Cooney, guard, and Avery, end rush, the missing veterans, will be here early this week.

Johnny Kilbane Is on Way Here

CLEVELAND, O., Sept. 15.—Feather weight champion Johnny Kilbane has left here for Boston, where he will meet Jimmy Walsh of Butterfly in a twelve round bout next Tuesday night.

"Sledge" Wins His First Battle by a Knockout After Hard Struggle.

"Sledge" was thinking of the old farm and of the girl who used to walk to the little brick schoolhouse with him just a few years ago, when he was called to the centre of the ring, where the referee explained the rules which were to govern this, his first professional fight.

He shook the mitt of "Soldier" Batchelor before he went to his corner and waited for the bell which was to launch his career as a prizefighter. It seemed as though the gong would never ring and his thoughts again traveled back to his boyhood days.

Clang!!

A hush fell on the crowd at the ringside as "Soldier" Batchelor tore across the ring. "Sledge" saw him coming and was surprised to see the look of hatred on the "Soldier's" face.

He never thought a man could look so much like a beast.

He was shaken from head to foot by with the Philadelphia Nationals, but to the terrific blow, and he felt the warm blood trickle from his bruised lips before the smart and pain.

When he realized that the face in front of him was mocking him he forgot everything but the desire to maul and tear his antagonist.

When round after round he failed to hurt the "Soldier" he became furious, and, disregarding his manager's counsel, he forgot the defence that was so carefully taught him and rushed and swung wildly until, after being floored three times, he was unconsciously swinging and stumbling about the ring.

Hi Ryan jumped through the ropes and yelled above the roar of the frenzied mob:

"Great, Sledge; you've knocked him cold!"

He had won his first battle.

RICHARDS PLANS CHANNEL SWIM NEXT SUMMER

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—"The English channel next," declared Sam Richards, the great long-distance swimmer of the L Street Swimming Club of Boston, today. Richards is confident that he will be able to cross the channel when he attempts this difficult feat next Summer.

Richards yesterday smashed all swimming records when he swam from the Battery to Sandy Hook, on his first attempt, in eight hours and twelve minutes. Not satisfied with reaching the Hook, Richards started on the return trip, but after going a mile in twenty-three minutes he gave up. He was in fine condition and could have undoubtedly gone further but felt well enough alone, as he was just about to begin a battle against the strong incoming tides.

Captain Alfred Brown is the only other person to negotiate the Hook swim. Some few weeks ago, after four previous attempts, Brown made the swim in thirteen hours and thirty-eight minutes. He did not attempt to return, however, as he was in bad condition at the finish. Richards' time is five hours and twenty-six minutes faster than that of Brown, and practically earns him the undisputed title of amateur swimming champion of the world.

Miss Rose Pitnoff, the little Dorchester girl, also attempted the Hook swim yesterday, but after battling against the tides for 11 hours and 23 minutes she was forced to leave the water only a quarter of a mile from her goal. It was Miss Pitnoff's second attempt.

Buckley Says Moran Is Dodging Smith

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—Jim Buckley, manager of Gunboat Smith, the white hope destroyer, today openly accused Frank Moran, conqueror of Al Palzer and a number of other white hopes, of cowardice.

"Moran roared around about wanting a fight with Gunboat," declared Buckley. "We agreed to give him a fight next Friday night and were ready to post our $1,000 forfeit. As soon as he knew we meant business Moran backed out."

Jack Coombs Is Back in Hospital

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 15.—"Jack" Coombs of the Athletics' twirling staff is in the University Hospital. Muscles of the giant pitcher's back, weakened by a recent attack of typhoid fever, physicians say, were unable to stand the strain put upon them in his attempt to work into condition, and it is said he may be placed in a plaster cast for several weeks.

Physicians at the hospital say that in rare instances following a severe attack of typhoid fever muscles of the body have been known to stretch.

Pelky Says He Lied in 'Fake' Confession

CALGARY, Alta., Sept. 14.—After a conference with Tommy Burns, his manager, Arthur Pelky, the heavyweight boxer, has loaned a statement in which he retracted a "confession" made recently at Portland, Ore., in which Pelky declared that Burns and he had "faked" a match at Calgary last Spring.

Men's Fall Model

Above drawing shows lines of one of our Men's Fall Models—in Tans and Blacks—having the low heel, broad shank, invisible eyelets and the comfortable toe—features that have proven extremely pleasing to our customers this summer in a similar model.

The smart effect is produced this year without the use of the straight, hard line, which in some former models made an otherwise fine style shoe appear too stiff in expression.

Kilbane Wants to Be a Second M'Govern

Featherweight Champion Will Try and Knock Out His Opponents in Future

By JACK CONWAY.

JOHNNY KILBANE, the featherweight champion, and Jimmy Walsh will clash in the most important ring contest of the week at the Atlas A. A. tomorrow night. These two great little fighters are scheduled to perform in a twelve-round affair and it should be a brilliant affair.

Kilbane is due to arrive in Boston today. He has done his training for the match on a farm outside of Cleveland and is in splendid condition for the fray. The prince of the featherweights will weigh 126 or 127 pounds when he enters the ring at the Arena tomorrow night and should be as strong as a young horse.

The Cleveland youth is planning a strenuous campaign in the squared enclosure and is confident that he will prove that he is one of the greatest featherweight champions in ring history. Before starting for Boston he said:

"I will admit that I have not been very active in the defence of my title of late. But I will get busy Tuesday night, when I battle the skilful Jimmy Walsh of Boston.

"I will make no more careful fights from now on. Every bout I engage in will be a battle.

"I intend to become the Terry McGovern of the featherweights and stop as many challengers as I can. I have spent most of the Summer on a farm outside of Cleveland and now weigh about 127 pounds.

"However, 122 pounds ringside will still be easy for me. I am in the finest physical condition of my life and just itching for fights."

BEERS DECISIVE VICTORY.

IT is obvious that Kilbane will try his hardest to score a decisive victory over Walsh in this city. He wants to prove that he is a real champion, and not a "paring" boxer, as some of the New York critics have claimed.

There is no denying that Kilbane is one of the most skilful boxers developed in recent years. His worst enemy admits that he is a ring wizard. Johnny's critics, however, have asserted that he does not fight enough—that is, he is content to outpoint his opponents instead of trying to land a knockout punch.

Kilbane has won very few of his recent bouts by landing a decisive wallop, but he is still able to punch hard. He knocked out Joe Rivers in sixteen rounds on the Coast in September, 1911, which proved that he was a sweet puncher.

At the time it was claimed that Kilbane flattened the Mexican with a lucky blow. That is what is usually said about a boxer who wins by a knockout after being outpointed for the greater part of a bout. But, regardless of all this, Kilbane hit Rivers hard enough to send him to the canvas for the count, and any boxer who can stop Rivers is able to punch as hard as the best of them.

WALSH READY FOR FRAY.

IN Walsh, Kilbane will meet a boxer who is every bit as clever as himself and who has mastered all of the fine points of the boxing game during his career in the ring. Kilbane will enter the ring tomorrow evening a favorite in the betting, but there will be many close followers of the mitt game who will place a little fiver on the Boston boy's chances of winning. Many wagers have been made that Walsh will get at least a draw with the champion.

When Kilbane and Walsh last fought in this city the contest was declared a draw by Referee Maffitt Flaherty. After the "go" there was a difference of opinion among the "fans." Some thought that Walsh should have been given the verdict, while there were others who were of the opinion that the featherweight champion had the best of the fighting. The writer favored Kilbane, but every man has got a right to his own views on ring contests.

HAS TRAINED AT WINTHROP.

WALSH has been training in the open air at Winthrop. Jimmy has been Summering at Winthrop and has kept himself in perfect physical condition by living an outdoor life. He has done considerable rowing and light boxing. During the past two weeks he has increased his work and will be at his best when he crawls through the ropes at the Atlas Club tomorrow night.

GOOD PRELIMINARY CARD

A STRONG preliminary card has been arranged by Matchmaker Johnny McGann. Joe Chick of Fall River and Young Jasper of this city will exchange punches in the semi-final bout of eight rounds. These two boys have already shown to advantage at previous shows at the Arena. Jimmy Reardon of Brockton will meet Jimmy Sullivan of Boston, while Frankie Dubois of Wakefield will battle with "Young" Sandow of Chelsea in the other preliminary bouts. The last two contests will be six-round affairs.

LIVELY SESSION IS EXPECTED AT N. E. A. A. U. MEET

By THOMAS J. HALPIN.

The annual meeting of the New England Amateur Athletic Association will be held tonight in the Revere House. The purpose of this meeting is to elect new officers for the coming year and to appoint a board of managers. In addition to the regular business that will ordinarily come up at such a meeting, the session tonight promises to be a lively one for a new constitution which has been drawn up by a committee composed of W. C. Prout, E. F. Babb, and Joseph MacCabe will be acted upon by the members.

Many important changes are to be made regarding the association's rules and by-laws and the duties of the officials, the principal of these being that no member of the board of managers can hold office in the New England Amateur Athletic Association who is a professional, the term professional coming under the same heading and under the same regulations as the active competitors in the A. A. U. ranks are governed by.

Another important rule which, if adopted, will affect many, is that no member of the association can receive any compensation for any services rendered in athletics while serving as an official of the association.

If these two rules are adopted, which is unlikely to happen, it will cause much comment, for these rules are different than the ones which govern the National body. There is sure to be a great deal of criticism and argument before the new regulations regarding officials are accepted or turned down, for nearly half the members of the board of governors are professionals under the proposed by-law.

In addition to the new constitution which will be acted upon, the application of a number of new clubs will be brought up. Among the number will be the new Irish-American Club which was recently organized in this city.

The election of president will be very close, as it is probable that Alfred Lill will run for the office. In addition to Lill, it is quite likely that Tom Riley, the present head of the association, will be a candidate for office. Riley has been very ill of late and this may deter him from being a candidate.

In the event of Riley not running and no candidate appearing in the field against Lill, it is probable that William C. Prout may run for office. Prout has not expressed himself definitely either way and will cause uneasiness among the other aspirants for office. In view of the fact that Mr. Lill is liable to become the next National president, he should be a very strong candidate for the office.

Kenosha Promoters Want Sam Langford

CHICAGO, Sept. 15.—Kenosha (Wis.) boxing promoters have made a bid for Sam Langford, the Boston "tar baby," to appear with Cleve Hawkins, Chicago heavyweight, in a bout to be staged at the Kenosha Club within two weeks.

RED SOX AFTER SECOND GAME

The Red Sox look for a second victory over the Browns this afternoon at Fenway Park, despite the hard battle they encountered in the opening contest. Ray Collins will most likely do the pitching and with the big southpaw twirling true to form there is nothing to fear from the St. Louis aggregation. St. Louis has been always known to play close games with the Red Sox, but the Boston team generally comes out on top.

In the last twenty-two games the Red Sox have played, sixteen have resulted in victories. That is traveling at a percentage better than .700. Right now the Red Sox are winning with more consistency than any team in the league which shows that the boys and Bill Carrigan's generalship is working in the right way.

Probably no man has figured in Boston's victories more than Tris Speaker. Speaker has been batting at a terrific clip of late and has gone so far as to make the fight for batting honors a three-cornered affair. Tris is now but nine points behind Cobb, the leader, and two in the rear of Joe Jackson, the runner-up. Tris has played in one game less than Jackson this season, but has made four more hits.

During the past week "Spoke" shoved his average up three points. By travling at his present gait for the remainder of the season, Speaker has a fine chance to overhaul both the Detroit and Cleveland star and gain the premier batting honors.

Reich to Box Morris.

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—Al Reich, the former amateur heavyweight champion, has been matched to meet Carl Morris of Oklahoma. They will come together in a ten-round bout at the Garden A. C. Speaker has been batting at a terrific here next Friday night.

HARVARD SQUAD OF 75 OUT FOR PRACTICE

Percy D. Haughton starts his sixth year as head coach at Harvard football this afternoon, and will then have an opportunity to refer his first week of practice as one of the most arduous he has ever undertaken, as he will have to make or break nine of his regulars to turn out another championship football team.

Seventy-five men at least are expected to look to upon the coach and Captain Ben Storer this afternoon, don their togs and do a little limbering up upon the greensward adjacent to the varsity athletic field.

The guards and tackles will be taken in hand by Coaches Withington and Fisher and put through a few warming up stunts such as kicking, breaking through and crawling.

Dexter Pillsbury will give the centres a few minutes of snappy fight work, while the ends, in charge of Lee Tracy, will devote their attention to the duties of their positions. Ex-Captain Wendell will assist Coach Haughton with the backs and quarterbacks.

The whole contingent, after passing the ball about and dribbling for a few minutes, will be given a long signal practice to obtain, will run about the field, simulating the first afternoon's work.

Two men, prominent candidates for their positions, are in difficulty with the college office. Wrightington, whose weak back may prevent him trying out for centre, attributes it entirely with Widow Nolan, in an endeavor to get into collegiate good graces again, while Hi St. J. Smith, an end, is also down in his studies. It is said.

Practice starting tomorrow will be both morning and afternoon, until the reopening of the University next Monday. Coach Haughton will be in charge during the afternoon and Coach Leary in the forenoon.

Gilbert Gallant in Many Ring Bouts

Gilbert Gallant, the Little Chelsea Terrier, is home again after spending several weeks with some friends down and near Plymouth. He has the picture of health and says he feels as strong as a mouse, and will start training today at Chelsea with Young Buckley of Chelsea and Young McDonough of Roxbury to get in shape for matches. On September 20 he will meet Grover Hayes of Philadelphia at Lowell, and on the 30th he will meet Matty Baldwin or Johnny Dodge of New York at Mechanics' Hall, Lowell, and the following week he will battle Ray Woods at Westfield.

Gilbert declares he is through with the fighting game for all time, "and this ain't no Patti farewell, neither; it's a real finish," adds Gilbert. Nelson made about $200,000 in the ring and has all of it carefully invested.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Sept. 15.—Following a strenuous few days in Cincinnati, the Boston Pilgrims romped into the city and today will open a three-game series with the Pittsburgh team. Two games will be played this afternoon and one tomorrow.

The second half of today's double-header is a transferred game from Boston. It rained in that city on the final day of the Pirates' last visit to the South end grounds and the game was shifted to Pittsburgh.

None of the Boston players would discuss the Tinker-Maranville-Myers row in Cincinnati, but it is likely that all implicated will days suspension or fines within a few days. The account of the wrap has been mailed to President Lynch's New York office. Lynch is in Cincinnati where he is to attend a draft meeting of the National League today.

The scrap that Maranville, Myers and Mann will be able to take part in today's game, as Lynch will not be in New York for a few days.

It is possible that Manager Stallings of the Boston team will use young Rudolph and Walter Dickson in the two games against the Pirates. These two pitchers have been the most effective against Pittsburgh this season and Stallings is anxious to get away with the majority of wins for the season. By winning all the games of this series, the Pirates can just even up with the Pilgrims for the season's work with eleven games.

Nelson Retires from the Ring

SEATTLE, Wash., Sept. 15.—Battling Nelson, perhaps the greatest lightweight fighter who ever lived, has announced that he has hung up the gloves that bring him fame and never will don them again.

Pat defeated he is through with the fighting game for all time, "and this ain't no Patti farewell, neither; it's a real finish," adds Pat. Nelson made about $200,000 in the ring and has all of it carefully invested.

THE bitter wound set to our keenest pain
Time soothes.
The furrow in our brow will go again—
Time soothes.
If memory wakens suffering at last,
We feel,
Life moves in struggle to forget the past,
Hearts heal.
But still the wound a little scar has left—
Time soothes.
Dreams dare
Arise in memory of what they are not left.
There exists
But memory that bites the obliterants,
A little sob escapes in the heart and lips,
And then "reality" is here again
Time soothes.

And waits to see it push away the clod,

Household Hints

Before scraping new potatoes let them soak for a little while in water to which a piece of common washing soda has been added. This will make them scrape easily, and they will not stain the fingers.

Grease potatoes first with a little butter before baking, and, when cooked, they will be beautifully mealy and crisp, with the glazed appearance that makes them so appetizing.

The fly nuisance can be reduced to a minimum by the liberal use of paraffin on the kitchen dresser. This will not harm the furniture or woodwork, and the smell soon passes off.

If new enamel saucepans are placed in a pan of warm water, allowed to come to a boil, and then cooled, they will last much longer before either chipping or burning.

Three tablespoonfuls of baking soda in a quart of water applied with a rough cloth will remove the old varnish very easily when you wish to revarnish furniture.

Always put a piece of muslin round the hand underneath the ribbon of silk when trimming a hat. This saves the hairpins from breaking the straw.

"Fur" comes off the inside of a kettle quite easily if vinegar has been boiled in it for two or three hours.

By OLIVETTE

ISN'T this a chic little chapeau on the left for early Fall? It is of white satin, or supple felt, and is a "flower-pot" shape, with a band of self-material finishing at the edge. Draped about the high crown is black velvet. Two wide loops flare up in front, and a softer loop descends across the crown. The home milliner will find this hat very easy to copy—and the expense won't be very great.

Twenty-five cents for the flower-pot foundation shape, a dollar for the yard of satin, and a dollar and a half for a yard of black velvet cut on the bias. This velvet may be cut in three strips, which can be stitched together invisibly. Another quarter for millinery wire and lining, and for three dollars you have a smart and unusual little "frat" hat.

The evening gown of pale lemon brocade is rather startling without transgressing the limits of good taste. The gown itself takes the form of a princess dress cut with blousing waist and fish-tail train. The top part of the bodice is a dainty kimono of fine mallne lace and ivory chiffon. Under this shimmers a pale apricot ribbon which is laid across the chest and under the arms. Over the dress and joining the "V" neck is a long coat of palest apricot chiffon, which falls to the bottom of the skirt with no opening for the arms. This cape-coat is edged with an applique of dull gold and pink roses, with leaves of green gold. Under this trimming the chiffon coat tightens into a few folds at the back.

Behold a hat, on the right, that the "home milliner" can never hope to manufacture! Of tete du negre velvet is the smart shape which scoops over milady's right eye, turns smartly up at the left side and the back and arranges itself in a soft, "scar" Tam o' Shanter crown. And of the same wonderful smoky dark brown shade is the great cascading spray of paradise, that extends across the back. The price? Oh, it can be done for one hundred and fifty dollars, if milady does not demand too generous a mass of the frothy paradise in her crown!

TODAY'S INSTALLMENT

As the journey was for the benefit of Mrs. Gretorex's health, which really had not been good, they made these stops often, and the longest one and the most fruitful, as you will presently discover, was in a small village called M——. I can locate it exactly when you wish me to do so. Here they remained a month and when they went away they carried with them a female infant whom they henceforth presented to the world as their own, under the name of Genevieve. I have the inner history of the matter from the woman who was present at the birth of the child and afterwards saw it transferred from the real parent to this rich but childless lady from New York. The circumstances were as follows: Mrs. Farley—you start at that name, yet you must have already guessed it—was a woman who had been suddenly bereft of her husband and all means of livelihood at a blow. She lived, or rather was staying on sufferance, in the same hotel at which Mr. and Mrs. Gretorex were then boarding, and the day had come for her to give birth to a child. Her room adjoined that of the New York lady, and though they had barely met in the halls and on the portico, Mrs. Gretorex possessed sufficient of the milk of human kindness to take a certain superficial interest in her unfortunate neighbor. She was with her more or less during the day, and when she heard the child cry—it was night, but she was not deterred by that fact—she rose and hastened into Mrs. Farley's room.

"An unexpected sight met her eyes. Stretched on the bed was the mother, with almost an expression of terror on her face, and in the arms of the relative, acting as nurse, and likewise on those of the doctor, was a child, each of which dropped its little head and let fall its little arms with so precisely the same aspect of helplessness that they looked even in that first hour of their life like the mirror of each other. Two, and the poor woman did not know how she was going to support one!

"Stop!" came from Dr. Cameron in hoarse and difficult tones. "You are speaking of my wife and——"

"The poor girl who looked so much like her that we both took her for Mrs. Gretorex."

A strange smile flitted over the doctor's pale lips, and that faraway gaze returned. But he soon mastered himself, and remarked with just a shade of bitterness.

"They were sisters, then?"

"They were sisters."

The silence which followed this speech was broken at length by the doctor.

"Go on with your story," he commanded. "I think I can see what happened."

"Yes, it is evident," rejoined the detective. "Mrs. Gretorex, who had no children, looked at this poor woman who was burdened with more than she knew how to take care of, and a sudden longing seized her. Approaching the infants, she looked at them both, and found they were equally healthy, pretty and promising. 'What would I not give for one of you,' she cried, and turning, glanced at the mother. Her words and her look were like a sudden gleam of light to the weak and almost despairing woman. Raising her head, she looked at the relative who was with her and smiled as that relative nodded her head, then she glanced at the doctor. 'Mrs. Gretorex is a person of means,' that gentleman declared. 'If she wants one of these little fatherless ones, you might do worse than let her have her.' The poor woman clasped her hands.

"'Are you in earnest?' she cried. 'Would you take—do you want——' 'I will consult my husband,' the lady interposed. 'Have the children dressed and in an hour I will return.' And so she left them, and when she came back there were the two infants laid side by side on the bed with the mother, making a picture such as you seldom see, the nurse declared. And the good lady went up to them and looked at them again, and seemed still more pleased and settled in her resolve than she had been before, and finally declared: 'I will take one of these children and bring it up as my own, and bequeath it my name and probably my fortune, upon one condition, and that is that if you give her to me you will give her to me utterly and neither try to follow her fortunes, nor concern yourself in any way with her affairs.'

GREATEST STORY of its kind since JULES VERNE

ALLANS' architects were as busy as his engineers. The most modern harbors, with breakwaters, docks and safeguards of all sorts were created. Deep water came up to the enormous quays and the biggest ocean liners could lie there with the ease and safety of a skiff. Streets and houses leaped up where the ocean had been but a few years before. There were hotels, banks, department stores, churches, schools, libraries and museums where had been a rubbish heap.

One characteristic was common to them all. They were without vegetation. They stood on sand and looked granite, a blinding mirror for the sun's hot light, and swept with dust storms in the high winds. But squares and parks and drives were all laid out and the gardeners were busy. Within a few years they would be model cities in every respect. As it was, Tunnel City, N. J., had more than eight hundred thousand inhabitants before the tunnel was completed.

ALLAN CHANGED

And Allan was still the master of it all; but a great change had come over him with his whitening hair. He was no longer the daring and dashing challenger of Nature that had begun the digging of the tunnel more than fifteen years before. He gave every order and every change of strategy careful consideration, but he gave the final word. He was no longer callous to the cost. Sometimes in his heart he doubted for a moment if the end excused the price he was paying. In the early days he was unmoved when some sudden stroke of bad luck wiped out a dozen or score or even fifty men. It could not be avoided—he was doing his best—that had satisfied his conscience.

But now that easy indifference had forsaken him. He avoided the casualty statistics. When in his statistics about the borings the body of even a single dead man crossed his vision, he winced. He spent time and money without stint on the purchase and development of safety appliances and the most modern delicate scientific instruments that might give warning of fire or flood. When one of these gave the faintest indication of the nearness of danger he ordered all work stopped and the galleries cleared back for a safe distance while the most careful soundings and tests were made.

Ethel refused to be pushed into the background as Maud had been, and she was by his side every moment that she could. But these moments were few enough, and became fewer and fewer, and the work became more desperate and exacting. His hair was nearly white and he could not remember when he had had an unroubled night of rest. More and more he was shut out from the world, even the world of his home. Nothing interested him but these two raw, ragged rock-ends, against which his monster drills were thundering as they drew nearer and nearer together, far under the bed of the Atlantic.

Once a month or so he called on Lloyd. The great financier was now so old that he could not make much of a physical effort without the greatest fatigue. But his mind was still comparatively clear, and with Ethel's aid he still directed the finances of the company.

In the twenty-first year after that memorable gathering on the roof of the Hotel Atlantic disaster descended upon the tunnel once more. It lasted only two months, because Allan made every concession and voluntarily added many things to induce the men to return to work.

ANOTHER SETBACK

It came upon them with the suddenness of the explosion, and but for O'Malley's coolness and courage there might have been a panic such as had caused the needless death of hundreds in that other catastrophe. The incident that precipitated it occurred, fortunately, while O'Malley was personally directing the work at the head of the boring.

The great driller had been tearing into the rock at the rate of five yards to the minute, when suddenly it was noticed that the thermometer had risen five degrees in the past half-hour. There was an instant rush for the trains, and here it was O'Malley distinguished himself for the second time in a great crisis. He brought every man back twenty miles into the safety zone without as much as a scratch or bruise among them.

The work came to a dead stop in that gallery and the next day the men on the other side refused to go in. They argued that there were two sides to a volcano and you could hit upon it as well from one side as the other.

O'Malley, Allan and the other chiefs made careful inspections, but they could not find danger signs. The character and conformation of the rock seemed to preclude the possibility of the presence of any great pocket of molten matter in the vicinity. Allan summoned the leading scientists of the world, and they backed up this opinion, after careful study both in the tunnel and by observations of the ocean bed above it.

But the fact of the increased temperature was indisputable, and many men of science held that while all signs failed of the axis of the tunnel was undoubtedly skirting a submarine volcano. These were in a minority, however, and O'Malley, at the end of four weeks, called for volunteers at $10 an hour to continue the boring until the absence of danger had been definitely established.

In a week O'Malley collapsed and was brought out unconscious. Inside twenty-four hours he was back again. The torture was unbelievable; but in a month they had demonstrated that there was no increase of temperature, and when the thermometer showed a falling off of a degree the men returned to work under increased pay. They worked now in two-hour shifts at $6 an hour.

A STARTLING ANNOUNCEMENT

They worked entirely inside, and in their resting periods they were scientifically tended by doctors and nurses. On the twenty-fourth anniversary of the taking out of the first dirt the calculation shows that twenty-seven and five-eighths miles separated the ends of the two borings. Allan announced that on the twenty-fifth anniversary he would pilot the first regular passenger train through from Tunnel City to Allan City, England, on a trial run.

The announcement made a tremendous sensation. For a generation the tunnel had been an unconscious upon the shoulders of the world. There were successful men of affairs who could not remember the day it was begun. It had grown to be a sort of institution, something that was sure to be forever. And now the master of it all announced that the last rivet would be struck within the year, and the tunnel would become an every-day fact, a common means of transportation.

Yet there seemed to be no doubt of it. Work had been stopped at both ends by a concerted arrangement, and O'Malley and Wainwright, handling the keys themselves, had exchanged congratulations and witticisms under the ocean bed by wireless.

The already terrific pace was increased. Every man down to the lowest laborer was fired with the enthusiasm of certain triumph. Six months of murderous work followed, and the mathematicians declared that only a few hundred feet of rock now separated the borings. Then there came an ominous series of tests and conferences. O'Malley and Wainwright armed themselves with the most delicate seismographs that science had produced. They set their watches until they coincided to the second and made a series of blasts, first one and then the other. But there was not a tremor from the sensitive little needles.

For the first time since the work began Allan was almost panic stricken. From time to time everything had failed him—lost figures. On these he knew he could rely, and now apparently these had played him false. He assembled a dozen of the best mathematical experts and they were unable to find any but minor errors in calculation. The sum of their finding was a thousand feet, instead of a few hundred, but that would explain the action of the seismographs, which were adjusted to register a much slighter shock than one of the terrific tunnel blasts up to five thousand feet.

THE BORING MISSED!

Then the newspapers got hold of it, and the news was a world-wide sensation. They pointed out that every calculation above and below the sea and in the minds of the greatest of mathematicians indicated that less than a thousand feet separated the borings, but the fact remained that the borings seemed to have missed each other.

Daysey Mayme and Her Folks

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE

DAYSEY MAYME APPLETON is such a lover of music that a deaf man at a concert has only to look at her face to tell the character of the music the orchestra is playing.

If dignified and majestic, her jaws move slowly and with regular rhythm over her chewing gum. If the music is rapid, they move rapidly, irregularly, and almost gaily.

In this distinctive fashion may one know, by looking at Daysey Mayme, if she is hearing the majestic splendor of Chopin's funeral march, or the fantastic, twinkling notes of the Cabbage Leaf Glide.

She had chewed her way gravely slowly and solemnly through three selections from Wagner, closing each selection with a crashing of her jaws that denoted an artist's appreciation of art, when a long-haired man took his seat at the piano.

Daysey Mayme knew instinctively that he was a great musician, for she could not pronounce his name. She tried to pronounce the selection assigned to him on the program, and almost swallowed her gum. Another proof of his ability.

He began to play, and Daysey Mayme's jaws worked slowly. His hands moved a little faster, and her jaws quickened their movement. It was a symphony in gum to watch her.

Then, as one warms up to a subject, his hands moved more rapidly till it looked as if he had ten hands; then twenty and then forty all moving at once.

Faster and faster moved his hands. Faster and faster moved Daysey Mayme's jaws. His hands flew from the highest sharp to the lowest flat, punctuating the air with many notes on the way. Never pausing, never resting, taking the high notes as easily as the low, and jumping from bar to bar breathlessly.

All eyes in the audience were on him. No one noticed that a young woman in front was growing faint with exhaustion. No one realized the penalty an artistic soul must pay for a delicately-tuned temperament, till Daysey Mayme rose to her feet, gave a scream that sounded choked in the middle, and fell to the floor.

Her jaws had become locked!

"She must never go to a concert," her hysteron commanded her when he unlocked them. "She is too sympathetically and sensitively organized."

A negro woman in Savannah was preparing to get married. For four weeks before the ceremony she saved up her wages, and immediately after the wedding she handed up her mistress and asked her to take charge of the fund.

"I'll take it, of course," said the puzzled lady; "but, Mandy, won't you be needing your money to spend on your honeymoon?"

"Miss May," said the bride, "does you think I'se gone to trust myse'f wid a strange nigger and all dat money on me?"

Obstinate Acne Quickly Yields

Fine Remedy That Clears Skin of Pimples on Cheeks, Temples, Sides of Nose and Chin.

Acne attacks the glandular structure of the skin, more particularly those tiny glands that secrete fat.

And it is here that S. S. S., the famous blood purifier, is most active in its influence.

There is one ingredient in S. S. S. the purpose of which is to so stimulate the cells in the tissues that they select from the blood the nutriment that makes new skin and thus eliminates all irritants, acids and parasites that inflame the glands. There is a morbid tendency of the fine network of blood vessels in the skin to throw off impurities, but where a persistent inflammatory process has invaded the skin, the natural repair work of the blood is interfered with. It requires the stimulating activity of S. S. S. to overcome such morbid conditions. If you have been troubled with acne, do not despair of a cure.

You can get S. S. S. in any drug store, but insist upon having it. The great Swift Laboratory in Atlanta, Ga., prepares this famous blood purifier, and you should take no chance by permitting anyone to recommend a substitute. And if your blood condition is such that you would like to consult a specialist freely, address the Medical Dept., The Swift Specific Company, 161 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga.

"Giddap!"

By NELL BRINKLEY

Copyright, 1913, by International News Service.

HERE is the driver of all relentless drivers. The baby in your house. He drives with a rose-leaf hand and an urge of iron. "The hand of steel in a silken glove." He is the greatest of all drivers because he prods even ambition—that demoniac little driver whom Tad pictured a few weeks ago lashing on the human race to labor and dare! The day he first lies between a man and his mate, no matter how poor material they are, the woman begins to dream, and, for the sake of bringing true these dreams, gallantly goes through the little, daily, grilling services and efforts that make big results; the man dreams, too, and under this new and mighty whip dares and labors and reaches! And as he reaches his power grows and lengthens. As when he strives to touch his elbows in the back. At first they are wide apart and the muscles crack under the strain. Day by day the elbows grow nearer—more supple—they accommodate and strengthen themselves to this new, surprising effort.

So the man's talent grows more supple—answers "right up" to his insistent call. For the call here is "I want!" And the urge behind these two human beings is the biggest dream—the future of their baby and love of him!

He drives sundered people back into one another's lives. Drives under the great impulse of tenderness. For his sake the man steps over the busy ant on the pavement. Thinking of him, the woman feeds a forlorn kitten and stops to tip a carriage top between the sun and the eyes of a stranger's baby. Through him ancient feuds have healed over. The man writes great stories—because he needed money—and he needed money because of this DRIVER. And, oddly enough, men have drawn out the greatest and the sweetest of themselves under a lash.

This picture—until you think—seems something too mild and paradisal and blissful to show the driver of all relentless drivers at work. But a toy harness is all he SEEMS to use. Knit close to one another, they never KNOW they are driven. Their way is sometimes pretty rough, but it SEEMS to stand lovely around them painted by the hand of the joys they know. And his spurring-cry is the babyish word "GIDDAP!" So the picture seems to tell the story—to me.

The Manicure Lady

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

"WILFRED is going with a suffragette now," said the Manicure Lady. "He met her at a lecture on poetry and other positions the other night, and I guess she must be different from most of the suffragettes that I have seen, because Wilfred says she is a queen and that she walks in beauty like the night, whatever kind of way is walk that is. He don't call her hair back at all, he calls it her tresses, and instead of talking about pot swell lumps he says she has noble curls. I have had a lot of admirers, George, but none of the gents that ever shined up to me called my eyes eyes. That one line of talk might have went in the good old days, but plain talk and a good haircut wins more of us treating girls nowadays.

"It's funny, George, how love will differ it says. The girl a fellow loves can make him change his mind quicker than he changes his tie. Wilfred used to be fierce against the suffragettes. He wrote a little poem, he called it, for all the men to sing, a kind of a jack against women even dating to think of having the sacred right of the ballot.

"I guess he didn't get no men to sing it, and it was an awful panning for the girls that wanted to vote. And the time the suffragettes had their parade over in New York not very long ago, Wilfred ran along with the rest of the cringe and roasted the walking women as hard as he could. That was always Wilfred's speed anyhow, and I told him so when he got home all tired and hoarse, and the next time he asked me for a free spot I turned him down flat.

"Well, anyhow, as I was saying, this new girl of his has got him shouting for what she calls votes for all, and he and father had a regular row at the table last night. The old gent ain't so good a talker as Wilfred, but he had one thing on brother because he kept all the time throwing up to Wilfred how he used to knock the very cause that he is plugging for now. There ain't much comeback to that kind of arguments, and after a while Wilfred shut up. The row all started over a food poem that Wilfred wrote last night called, 'Vote, Fair Woman, Vote.' I brought it down to read it to you.

"You didn't have to do that," said the Head Barber.

"But please listen, George," implored the Manicure Lady. "'Tis the level, this is so cute it is good. Listen:

Vote, fair woman, vote!
Your right must not be denied to you.
Men are a trampin' on thy throat,
And often they have tried to you.
From where the cold Pacific rolls
To where the Atlantic holds each boast,
Let the shout this cry, a million souls,
Vote, fair woman, vote!

Vote, fair woman, vote!
There is no reason why you shouldn't.
Gladly would I take off my coat
And work for him, only I couldn't.
I have so many tasks to do.
The mending pile will known peet,
But this I ever shall sing to you:
Vote, fair woman, vote!"

"Did he read that to his new girl?" asked the Head Barber.

"I think so," said the Manicure Lady. "She doesn't go home when he called her up this morning."

—WILLIAM F. KIRK.

Safe Hints

Iron mould stains spread in any fabric they come in contact with in the wash. To remove them stretch the stained part over a basin nearly full of boiling water, so that the steam may penetrate the fabric, and apply with a feather a teaspoonful of salt dissolved in a dessertspoonful of lemon juice. When the marks disappear dip the material well into the hot water; afterward rinse very thoroughly in cold water.

If you happen to break a glass or valuable glass ornament, it can effectually and easily be mended in the following way: Melt a little isinglass in spirits of wine; add a small quantity of water; warm the mixture gently over a moderate fire. When mixed, by thoroughly melting it, it will form a perfectly transparent glue, which will unite glass so nicely and firmly that the joint will scarcely be perceptible to the most critical eye.

Make a paste the thickness of cream with whitening and water, and rub over the top, sides, shelves, door and back of the oven when cleaning. Leave the door open for a few minutes to dry. If this is done once a week it will prevent baraing.

It is not generally known that a tablespoonful of vinegar put into the water when poaching eggs will keep them from breaking.

To remove varnish stains on cloth, first wet the spots with alcohol two or three times, then rub with a clean cloth. If the color is injured sponge afterward with chloroform to restore it, unless the color is blue, in which case vinegar should be used instead.

Be very careful to keep your hands and nails nice. A bottle containing equal parts of glycerine, rosewater and eau de cologne should find a place on every washstand, and every time you wash your hands rub a little in before drying them.

It is well for those who do their washing at home to know that some ammonia in the water in which new flannels are washed will take all the roughness off, and save both labor and soap. The ammonia takes out the oil in flannel.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

LEARN SELF CONTROL

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Four months ago I accidentally became acquainted with a young man, one or two years my senior, with whom I immediately fell in love. On another occasion I again met him accidentally on the street and we took a walk, on which occasion he was very attentive to me. Since then he has assumed a very cold attitude toward me. His religion is different from mine. Do you think that is the reason? Will you kindly advise me as to what course to pursue, as I am madly in love with him?

YOUR acquaintance with him is limited to two walks on the streets, and you really know nothing of him. To give your love so desperately on such slight pretext indicates dangerous lack of self-control.

I am quite sure the question of religion does not intrude. He simply does not love you. He does not know you well enough. I want you to love and be loved, but I insist for your own sake that you exercise some restraint.

MARRY HER FIRST

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am in business with my father, who is wealthy. I am also in love with a girl of whom my parents disapprove because of the poverty of her family. They have no other objections. My father says he will disinherit me if I marry her. I have $500 of my own and want to go somewhere else and start in business for myself, for I will not give up the girl. She wants to go with me and help make our fortune. Shall we marry now and go together, or shall I leave her till my fortune is made? QUNADARY.

FIRST get some definite notion of where you intend to go and what you intend to do when you get there. Your present business prominence will assist you in this. Then marry the girl and take her with you, making up your mind when you do it that love will recompense you for all the privations you are facing. I am sure you will find the extreme West a good place for a beginning, but you will have very little of that $500 left when you get there.

Do You Know That—

The Mountaineering Club of Baden-Baden, a society for the encouragement of long walks, has just elected as honorary president a seventy-five-year-old lady, who last month made her sixtieth ascent of the loftiest peak of the range, a snow-clad crest 4,600 feet high.

Figures compiled by the Department of Inland Revenue at Ottawa show that the people of Canada last year smoked 975,525,501 cigarettes, an increase of nearly 200,000,000 over the figures for 1911.

"Swan upping" on the Thames, England, between Southwark Bridge and Henley, has resulted in the discovery of six hundred young birds, a remarkable number compared with previous years.

MOTHER LOOK AT CHILD'S TONGUE

If cross, feverish, constipated, give "California Syrup of Figs."

A laxative baby saves a sick child tomorrow. Children simply will not take time from play to empty their bowels which become clogged up with waste, liver gets sluggish; stomach sour.

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, or your child is listless, cross, feverish, breath bad, restless, doesn't eat heartily, full of cold or has sore throat or any other children's ailment, remember a good "California Syrup of Figs," then don't worry, because it is perfectly harmless, and in a few hours all the constipation, poison, sour bile and fermenting waste will gently move out of the bowels, and you will have a well, playful child again. A thorough "inside cleaning" is oftimes all that is necessary. It should be the first treatment given in any sickness.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. Look carefully and see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company." Don't be fooled.

HOW TRUST COMPANY SERVES THE PUBLIC AND THE INVESTOR

The Boston AMERICAN publishes today and will publish on successive Mondays, articles on "The Trust Company and its Activities." The articles will deal particularly with the relation of trust companies to the business communities, and will also give detailed information of value to investors. Every investor should read these articles, the first of which appears today.

THE TRUST COMPANY AND ITS ACTIVITIES.

How It Serves Men and Women, and Firms and Corporations in a Variety of Ways—Growth of Title Insurance and the Administration of Estates.

That the well-established, conscientiously managed and fully equipped trust company is the most perfect instrument that has yet been devised for handling fiduciary matters in all their varied and complicated forms, is a fact that no thinking man or woman will dispute. It is a fact that all who run may read.

Take for the purpose of illustration some large institution of this kind among the "up to date" trust companies of the country and consider its wide scope. It conducts banking, savings, title, bond, trust, mortgage and safe deposit departments. It pays interest on check and savings accounts. It buys and sells stocks and bonds. It loans money on collateral and on bond and mortgage. It sells investment mortgages. It acts as guardian of estates of minors. It makes real estate searches and it guarantees real estate titles.

It takes full charge of real estate and personal property. It acts as receiver, serves as administrator and executor of estates, and fills all the varied duties of a trustee. It acts as transfer agent and as registrar of the stocks and bonds of corporations. It gives free investment and general financial advice to beneficiaries under will in which it is named as executor and it performs a multiplicity of other duties.

With all its departments under one roof and under one general management it is a unit in itself and to the public in general what might be called the department store of finance. To obtain its share of this great and diversified business the trust company must have directors who are well known—directors who have the unbounding confidence of the public, to discharge its duties properly and profitably it must have officers who know their business in all its branches, and in all its manifold intricacies; it must have experts in each department—men carefully trained in the particular duties assigned to them—and it must have ample capital, in fact, great resources.

Many Perplexing Problems.

Unlike the individual, it must always be in a position to solve and handle not one financial problem of a given kind, but many and perplexing ones of a complicated character. It must be in a position to assist the weak and to defy the mighty. It must be ready at all times and under all circumstances to act with not only courageous alacrity but with sound discretion and rare wisdom.

That is all essential because millions of dollars of other people's money are confidently and confidingly intrusted to its care. Its responsibility is correspondingly enormous. It dares not be negligent. It must always be vigilant. It must be broad in policy, liberal in action and unblemishingly upright in its dealings. In all this it has the large force of employes, its trained department heads, its expert officers and its experienced board of directors.

The perfect parts of this business machinery work independently and yet cohesively. They give to the trust company and to its patrons, in any or all of its departments, not the mere opinion of an inexperienced individual, whose personal interests are elsewhere, but the combined and conscientious judgment of experts in whose minds each particular case becomes, for the time being, the sole concern of the institution. In that there is to be found a striking explanation of the reason that the union there is strength."

That strength not only aids, but protects, those who do business with the trust company. Their protection does not end there, however. In addition to this combined, well seasoned judgment there is the peculiar work of the auditing committee of the well organized company. That, in turn, is backed up by the audit of the outside expert accountants, who are employed from time to time, and over all is the unhampered and unrestrainable expert examination that is made officially at frequent and irregular intervals by the two-eyed independent examiners of the State Department of Banking. Under this varied and rigid inside and outside supervision the trust company must, of necessity, move along lines of honor and accuracy.

Growth is Marked.

So well established has this fact become and so marked is the confidence of the public in the great institutions of this kind that their business is increasing steadily, not only to their satisfaction, but to the financial well being and the peace of mind of those who patronize them. In no part of the trust company's field of endeavor is this growth more marked, demonstrated than in its title and trust departments.

Until within comparatively recent years real estate, title insurance, where it was known, was looked upon as something that could properly be classified as a luxury, if not a fad. Time, however, has answered so many deplorable cases in which the lack of this form of insurance meant financial loss, if not financial ruin, that title guarantees are now regarded by both buyers and sellers of real estate as absolute necessities.

Individuals and not a few corporations are no longer content with mere searchers or title abstracts. They have discovered, sometimes to their sorrow, that abstracts are simply histories of titles; that searchers are not much more, and that neither one nor the other gives real estate owners financial protection in cases of doubtful flaws. They have learned that these flaws spring from a great variety of hidden and unsuspected causes, and they have come to realize that protection against them is as essential as life or fire insurance. In seeking this title insurance they are going, for obvious reasons, to the institutions that by reason of their reputation and experience, their equipment and their large resources, are able to not only handle fair business promptly, but to pay inevitable losses, however large, without delay or quibble.

All Forms of Trust.

Actuated by much the same line of sound reasoning, men and women in all walks of life are going to the trust company with their fiduciary business. That business embraces every conceivable form of trust, not the least of which are the exacting duties of the executor of estates.

In that field the growth of the trust company has been pronounced. To understand the reason for this is not difficult. Take again the case of the up-to-date trust company. It is well known that such an institution has a special ty of administering estates. The experts whom it has assigned to this important work are trained specialists. They have done practically nothing else than that. They have no other duties to perform. They have no other business calls upon their time and attention. To their work they can give, and do give, and must give, their undivided attention and judgment. What they do, moreover, is subjected to the most searching, perhaps working system of checking. All that they do is examined and passed upon by one or more boards of the company's officers and by its executive committee. Much of it is submitted to the combined judgment of the institution's directors, and all of it is backed up by the trust company's resources and by its reputation, which it guards with unrelaxing care.

Under these conditions it is not remarkable that a steadily increasing number of men and women are naming the trust company as the executor of their estates. With them it is a simple matter of choosing between corporate experience and responsibility and individual inexperience and unreliability. Between the two, with little, if any, difference in the cost, the trust company no longer hesitating. They understand the immense advantages in the care of estates that the trust company has over the individual, experienced or inexperienced.

Has Wide Experience.

It is big; it is fearless; it never forgets; it is never "out"; it takes no vacation; it can never "disappear"; it has had wide and varied experience; it can not be reached by pleas; it cannot be frightened by threats; it is a perpetual institution; it will collect the largest trusts; it is paid in each case only what the courts may allow; it gives valuable advice to beneficiaries; it is always in a position to promptly make sound decisions; always, conscientiously carries out the wishes of the testators; it is never "too busy" to attend to the duties of the trusts; it has specialists for every duty; it treats all matters in its care as sacred and confidential; it protects beneficiaries from begging friends and relatives; it has no friends to reward and no enemies to punish; it makes prompt and complete reports to the county courts; it serves its own interests best when it serves its clients; it is never obliged to say "I didn't think"; it has distinguished, reputable, well-known trustees, officers and directors—and behind all that it does is always the potential faith of the great capital surplus and undivided profits.

TODAYS STOCK MARKET

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor.

There has been a further advance in the price of copper metal. One of the largest selling agencies sold for spot delivery in New York at 17 cents a pound this morning.

Stocks were lower during the first hour, the copper as a class did not respond to the metal rise in the quotations prices in London. Wolverine declined a point in Boston and fractional losses were sustained by Granby and Tamarack. Butte and Superior also declined. Business was small.

When the forenoon was half over in New York the list ranged lower. But several stocks had recovered part of recessions. Canadian Pacific was off ¾, Southern Pacific ¾, Union Pacific ¾, Lehigh Valley ¾, Steel, ¾, Amalgamated ¾, American Smelting ¾, Erie ¼, Baltimore & Ohio ⅝, and St. Paul ½. Reading was up ½.

Reading an Active Issue.

Reading was an active issue in early trading in New York and within a few minutes rose to 167½, it having closed at 166¾ on Saturday. It quickly lost this gain. It had been in considerable demand in London previously. So had Erie.

General Electric made the best showing in New York at the start, advancing more than a point. Canadian Pacific opened with a decline of 1¾. The list showed irregularity to initial transactions, and among the losses were steels, Union Pacific, Pacific Mail, Great Northern preferred ¾, and American Smelting ¾.

The Curb was already.

Americans in London were irregular, the undertone was easy, the tendency seemingly being influenced by the New York bank statement.

Big Trade for Panama Canal.

Europe's are taking steps to utilize the Panama Canal to a greater extent than was expected. Americans have done far less in comparison to prepare for the opening of the great waterway between the Atlantic and Pacific. Few lines are now rushing a ship building program. They can be counted. The Pacific Company, Royal Mail Steam Packet Company, North German Lloyd, Austrian Lloyd and the Hamburg-American line. The Royal Mail, North German Lloyd and the Hamburg-American will operate direct first-class passenger and freight steamers from Europe to San Francisco via the canal.

The Austrian Lloyd will send passenger and freight vessels from Mediterranean ports to the west coast of South America by the new sea route. It has completed arrangements with the Chilean government, and is building four new steamers for the proposed service.

The United Fruit Company, in addition to putting in new service there now operating liners this year, announces that orders have been placed in Glasgow for eight more vessels of the same type. Three of these will be placed in the regular Boston-Panama service, while the other five will be run from New York to Central America.

In addition to inaugurating a fast service from Southampton to San Francisco by way of the West Indies and the Panama Canal the Royal Mail Steam Packet Company has given orders for the construction of five 20,000 ton steamers for use in freight and passengers for service between New York and ports in Cuba and Peru via the Canal.

No Delay On Tariff.

There is to be no delay in pushing the tariff bill through the final stage of enactment. The conference will be finished this week and then it will be adopted by both houses and go to President Wilson for his signature. These are the predictions of Senator Simmons, chairman of the Senate Finance committee, who has had charge of the measure in his branch of Congress. There is not, he believes, any questions awaiting a settlement upon which conferees cannot speedily agree. Unless, it is said, the house insists, conferees keeps the conferees apart after all other matters have been settled, there is apparently no reason why a full agreement should not be reached in time to report the bill to the Senate and House next week from today.

It is expected by the friends of the measure that it will reach the White House by the middle of next week and that it should not take the Senate more than two days or three days to agree to the conference report. Less time than that will be required for House ratification.

After the tariff is disposed of the Senate will wait for a report from the banking committee on the currency bill. By some Senators it is expected that this will be ready early in October. Others think it will be a much longer interval before the committee acts. According to Senator Owen, chairman of the banking committee, there will be no Democratic caucus on the bill.

A number of members of that party are so much opposed to currency legislation at this session that it will be regarded as impolitic to undertake to bind them to support of the measure. It will be taught more convenient to wait after the bill was.

House leaders expect to pass the currency bill on Wednesday this week. Administration men not only expect about all Democrats in that body to vote for it, but many Republicans as well.

Situation in Europe.

It is reported from Berlin at the beginning of the week that the monetary situation has improved in Germany, although trading in stocks has been very quiet in the Berlin market. There, as elsewhere, confidence is made known by public's holding aloof. The position of the Reichsbank has been so much stronger that little demand is made on the private discount advance. Canadian Pacific has improved greatly. The culmination of features because of crop reports from Canada.

It is said that would have been an upturn in stocks in Paris, but for international events. Uncertainty to as to currency rates is also a deterrent at present.

There has been little business in stocks in London of late, but prices have become firmer. Within a few weeks revived activity is looked for. It is the first reduction in the Continental rate expected to follow. The only look abroad is reported as generally improved, although not at all reflected by the London stock exchange.

Financial News in Brief.

The London copper warrants market opened strong, spot being up £1 8s 9d and futures £1 5s.

Railroad earnings for June show an increase over 1912 in total operating revenues per mile of 5.9 per cent., and an increase in operating expenses per mile of 8.9 per cent. Net operating revenues per mile was less by $1.42, or 0.4 per cent. from that for June, 1912, while that for June, 1912, was 4.4 per cent. greater than for June, 1911.

Chicago analysts of government figures predict that this country will raise more wheat this year than ever before, and the largest surplus in many years large.

Within three months imports of fresh meat are estimated at between 2,000,000 and 3,000,000 pounds, and practically all of it came from Australia and Argentina. It is estimated that such imports for the fiscal year will total 8,000,000 pounds.

Dividend distributions being made today by forty-four railroads, industrial and public utility corporations total $9,909,506. This is $1,278,989 less than the total paid a year ago.

Await Outcome of Gilchrist Offer

Federal Court Postpones Action on Sale of Assets.

Judge Dodge of the United States District Court today postponed action on the sale of assets of the Gilchrist Company until the outcome of the competition offer of 50 cents on the dollar, made to all creditors by the company, is known.

Counsel for Isaac McLean's Sons company, a creditor for $88,000, presented a petition that the court order a sale of the assets of the company as a going concern at private sale or public auction, and that the proceeds be distributed among all creditors. Judge Dodge thought he would be unwise to act on the petition until results of the competition offer are known. Attorney Tyler stated that the competition offer has been referred to a referee, who will report on it in 1 to 3 weeks.

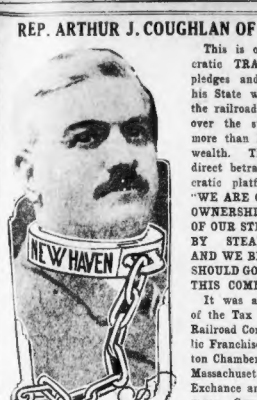
REP. ARTHUR J. COUGHLAN OF MAYNARD.



Governor whom the Democratic party elected.

Mr. Coughlan has seen fit to lend his aid to his own people instead of assisting a lawless, homicidal monopoly in increasing its grip upon all transportation systems in the State; he might today be renominated without injuring Mr. Walsh, the Democratic candidate for Governor. But now his presence on the same ballot with Mr. Walsh is impossible. Mr. Walsh denounces the law Mr. Coughlan voted for and declares that it ought to be revoked. Are the Democrats of Maynard going to put him on Mr. Walsh's neck like dead weight?

Auto News

By J. C. KERRISON.

European automobile manufacturers, through the medium of their International Trade Association, are endeavoring to standardize chassis dimensions with a view to simplifying the work of body building.

At a meeting held recently in Geneva a proposal was brought forward suggesting the standardization of three distinct car classes which will receive respectively two, four and six passenger bodies. In this proposal the length and width available for the body, the kickup of the chassis, the position of the brake and change speed levers and the inclination of the steering column will all be standardized, so that it will be possible for the body maker to build a body to fit an A, B or C class chassis without even having seen the chassis.

Under the European plan of having automobile bodies built by specialists, quite distinct from the chassis manufacturer, this arrangement will allow the body maker to produce his new model during the slack season without having to wait for the chassis to be handed over to him. There will also be an interchangeability of bodies which will be of immense advantage to the car owner.

Motorists down in little Rhode Island seem to have more "get-up-and-go" to them than the rest of mankind, for they are planning to hold a big automobile meet on the Narragansett Pier on October 26. Jack Lewain will be one of the entries, and he says that Ralph De Palma, a number of the other stars who will participate in the races at the Brighton Beach track on the 27th of this month will start in the Providence races.

C. H. Copeland Dies After Operation

Long Known as Head of State House News Service.

Charles H. Copeland, for ten years head of the State House news service, and one of the best known newspaper men and political writers in the State, is dead at the Boothby Hospital from pneumonia following an operation for appendicitis.

The funeral will be held at 2 o'clock tomorrow at the Mt. Auburn Cemetery Chapel.

Mr. Copeland was born in Cambridge and was thirty-nine years old. In 1911 he served as secretary of the Legislative Redistricting Committee and in 1912 as secretary of the committee to investigate voluntary associations.

He lived in Belmont, where he leaves a widow; also a sister of Mrs. Jacques Farrelle, and one daughter, Dorothy. He is also survived by two sisters, Mrs. Anna L. Campbell of Cambridge, and Mrs. C. S. Hicks of Revere.

CHOCOLATES TOO MUCH FOR "ASQUITH"

The late lamented "Asquith," equine hero of the suffragette journey from New York to Boston, who was shot by order of the S. P. C. A. because he had distemper, is succeeded by "Lloyd-George," the new suffragette steed.

The new horse was ushered out today by Miss Elizabeth Freeman and was named for the British Chancellor of the Exchequer. The new horse is a youngster compared to "Asquith," who was over twenty years old when killed.

Another interesting development today in connection with the argument over the treatment of "Asquith" by the suffragette leaders was the assertion by Miss Freeman that "Asquith" was much petted and even ate chocolate drops.

"We took four weeks to come from New York to Boston over the road," said Miss Freeman. "All along the way we talked kindly to 'Asquith.' We never overworked him. Twice on the way we had veterinary surgeons examine him. He was pronounced all right. There never were more than two riding in the wagon that 'Asquith' hauled.

"Whenever we had any candy, especially chocolate, which we did once in a while, we would say to ourselves: 'Now, we must remember Asquith.' When we got to Winthrop we found the horse was tired, but we did not know he had distemper."

Watch for Black Handers on Liners

The immigration authorities were advised today that there are thirty-two stowaways aboard of the liner Canopic, due tomorrow. It is said they payed from $100 to $150 in an attempt to gain admission into this country. They are said to be mostly Black Handers. Over 6,622 passengers are due on six incoming lines due here tomorrow. The following dark tomorrow: Cincinnati, Canopic, Monmouth and Parisian. Thursday the Arabic arrives and Friday the Palermo docks.

BOSTON AMERICAN

80 AND 82 SUMMER ST., BOSTON, SEPTEMBER 15, 1913.

LARGEST CIRCULATION IN NEW ENGLAND, DAILY AND SUNDAY

There Is a Remarkable Similarity Between the Declaration of Principles Made by Mr. Walsh and That Made by the Progressive Committee on Resolutions.

The AMERICAN calls attention to the remarkable similarity between the declaration of principles and policies made on Sunday of a week ago by Lieutenant-Governor Walsh and a similar declaration made on the Monday following by the Committee on Resolutions of the Progressive Party.

Both these statements came without reference to each other and were the result of independent thought upon the vital questions of the day. Both agree that the New York control of the New Haven Railroad should cease; that the conduct of the Democrats and Republicans in the last Legislature, which gave the New Haven Railroad the control of the trolleys in Western Massachusetts, WAS EVIL; that there ought to be a constitutional convention by which the great fundamental reforms which we cannot get from the Legislature may be obtained; that we should have State elections every two years if the people are protected by the initiative, referendum and recall; that the commissions should be consolidated and that a State purchasing agent for the public institutions should be created; that the initiative, referendum and the recall should be adopted; that the cities and towns in times of distress should be allowed to supply their people with such necessaries of life as coal, ice and other elemental articles which the trusts have cornered.

The similarity of the views of these opposing public men is no mere coincidence. It indicates that the views are sound on which they agree and that the people at large have reached these same opinions. The State of Massachusetts would be fortunate to have the policies contained in either the declaration by Mr. Walsh or by the Committee on Resolutions of the Progressive Party enacted into law.

If the Democratic convention and the Progressive convention adopt these views, then the voters will have to decide between the two parties according as they view the sincerity of the men who will represent the parties. IT IS CERTAIN THAT THE DEMOCRATIC PARTY WILL NOT BE GIVEN CREDIT FOR ANY PROFESSION OF PRINCIPLES OR POLICIES IF IT RENOMINATES THE FIFTY-TWO DEMOCRATIC REPRESENTATIVES AND SENATORS WHO VIOLATED THEIR PARTY PLATFORM LAST YEAR AND SURRENDERED OUR STREET RAILWAYS IN MORE THAN HALF THE STATE TO THE NEW HAVEN RAILROAD TRUST.

Summer Is Over. Did You Waste It?

Catch Up Now and Look Out for Spider Webs of Laziness

Copyright, 1913, by Star Company

Summer is over. What did it do for you?

Did you get just enough rest to make you WORK better?

Did you use the time of rest to build up strength, health and character for the work ahead?

Outside of your vacation were you one of those sensible enough to work and keep hard at it while others were doing nothing—although they might be pretending to work?

Are you going to try now, no matter what has happened in the past, to catch up with those that are ahead? Are you determined to get started and keep going?

It is fair weather and sunshiny now. But soon the wind will be cold and it will be snowing.

Life is young now, everything seems easy—but soon old age will come and the wind of anxiety will be cold AND IT WILL BE SNOWING.

Look out for idleness and its effects.

Look out for the habit so easily formed, so hard to lose.

Every lazy animal that has lived on this earth is hidden away in your body, inherited by you during past thousands of centuries.

The sloth hanging head downward is in you. The turtle sunning himself on the log is your ancestor, spiritual if not physical.

Even the fearful spider, feigning to sleep, but so wakeful in his web, is your direct ancestor, according to the scientists.

All the animals that have spent their lives on this earth, resting in the sun, idling, working only when they MUST, are represented in you.

Your brain has got to fight all of these animal influences. Your hope is the will power, the capacity for thought, which has caused the topmost joint in man's backbone to swell out into the skull in which man's brain thinks and rules the world.

How much time do you spend thinking about others, admiring what they do or watching what they do?

How often do you think about yourself, and question yourself, AND CRITICISE YOURSELF, as we all ought to do?

Have you let the spider web spread over you during the Summer, when everything seemed so easy and comfortable?

If you have, BREAK it and get to work. You can do it now, you won't do it later.

Don't wait for January first to find you looking back mournfully and making the usual solemn resolutions that will be forgotten before Washington's Birthday. Get out of the web and work. There are still plenty of chances for workers.

Signs of the Times

YOU SAY THESE ART. GONNA BE POPULAR?
SURE! IT LOOKS A LIL ODD T'YOU BECAUSE YOU BEEN WEARIN' A "STRAW" ALL SUMMER!
AROMA OF MOTH BALLS
SNIFF! SNIFF!

QUIT YER KIDDIN'!
HAVE A HEART! MAGGIE, GIVE US SOME OF THAT QUILT!

One Woman's Story

By VIRGINIA TERHUNE VAN DE WATER.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

SUMMER slipped into Autumn, and Autumn faded into Winter, and the life in the Middlebrook cottage continued on its somewhat monotonous way. Mary Fletcher knew few of her neighbors, for, although several of the villagers called to see her, she did not return their visits. She found them to be kind, good-natured people, but those with whom she was brought into contact had tastes and manners entirely different from hers.

It was now that she appreciated for the first time that in marrying a man on a lower plane of education, breeding and refinement from herself, she was cutting herself off from the class to which she belonged. There were in Middlebrook families of culture, but none of these came to see her. The men of such families, meeting Bert Fletcher on the train, found him coarse and common and took it for granted that his wife was like him, therefore never suggested that their wives and daughters should call on her and her mother. The people of whom Bert Fletcher would have made friends considered his wife "stiff and haughty." Mary went out little, for her household duties kept her at home much of the time and she did not like to leave her mother alone. Moreover she, herself, was not well and shrank from making new acquaintances.

So one day was much like another to the young wife. Each morning she prepared her husband's early breakfast, then cooked her mother's breakfast, taking her own morning repast after Bert had started for his train. He was a heavy sleeper, and awakening him at six o'clock on a Winter's morning was not an easy task. He usually lay abed so late that he had time to gulp down only a hasty breakfast before leaving the house. Under these conditions the wife could not eat with him, and he did not suggest that she do so, but seemed very willing to have her wait upon him, bringing him his cereal, egg, bread and coffee as he was ready for them.

When the furnace fire was started at the beginning of the cold weather, Bert had attended to it morning and night. Soon, however, he detailed the morning shaking down of the furnace to his wife, and, as she did not demur, he got into the habit of letting her perform this work. Several times lately he had come home at night with his breath smelling of liquor, and on these occasions Mary had advised him timidly to "go to bed early," and she had banked the fires for the night and, when necessary, pumped the water into the tank for use in kitchen and bath room.

In the hours between her husband's leaving and returning home, Mary toiled, not only because in a country house there is much actual toil to be performed, but to keep herself from thinking. Sometimes Bert remained in town all night, and she was conscious of a sense of relief when he did this, even while she was afraid to wonder what he was doing and if his breath smelt again of whiskey. Her father had never cared for liquor in any form and she had the horror of drunkenness felt by women who have known only temperate men. It seemed to her as if a dark shadow were creeping stealthily into her life, but she feared to face it.

There were days when Bert would appear as his good natured, clear-headed self, and then his wife tried to love him. She made herself consider his good traits, and to talk of them with her mother. When her mother-in-law came out at Christmas to make a visit, Mary played her part so well that the prejudiced matron remarked to Bert that perhaps, after all, he had "picked a better wife" than she had at first feared. "But she ain't very strong, Bert," she warned him. "If you don't want a sickly woman on your hands, make her take care of herself."

Herbert Fletcher laughed comfortably. "Oh, don't you bother about her, ma," he said. "She never complains, and she would if she was sick. Besides, she don't work near as hard as she did before I married her. Then she was in Pearson's all day, and doing housework at home morning and night as well."

Only once did Mary venture to speak to her husband of the fear that gnawed at her heart. It was the day after New Year's. Mr. Fletcher, Senior, returned to town on January first, declaring that she had "stood the lonesomeness of the country" as long as she could. Bert had escorted her back to New York, stating his intention of staying in town that night. Mary took it for granted that he would dine with his mother, but when, the next day—Sunday—he came out on the morning train, she saw by his heavy eyes that he had been up late the night before, and noted that there were still the fumes of stale tobacco on his breath. She said nothing about the matter, however, until, the noon meal dispatched, he threw himself on the parlor sofa to read the Sunday papers. Then he held out his hand to her.

"Sit here by me, why don't you, Mamie? Perhaps the smell of my pipe makes you sick, does it?" he asked.

Solicitude for her welfare was not frequent with him these days, and his kindly inquiry touched the unhappy woman. She came to him swiftly, and, drawing a chair up to the edge of the sofa, spoke eagerly, yet embarrassedly, touching his huge hand lightly with trembling fingers.

"Bert," she began gently, "I don't mind the smell of tobacco. But lately—I have worried—Bert—worried, dear—because your breath smells often of whiskey, and I have been afraid"——

Her husband threw back his head with a boisterous laugh. "Little goose!" he exclaimed. "Have you let a silly thing like that worry you? Look here, Mamie, I do take a glass of liquor with a friend sometimes, but it don't hurt me. I've been doing it for years, and I don't propose to stop it now, see?"

His wife did not answer and he went on.

"You don't know life and you don't know men. If you did you would understand that business demands that I treat a chap now and then, and drink with him, too, if I would not seem like a cheap skate. And, child," becoming serious as he saw her anxious face, "I never take a drop too much, so don't let's talk about the matter again. I'm free, white and a good ways past twenty-one, and I don't need management, even by you. Moreover," setting his square jaw stubbornly, "I don't mean to stand it from any woman. Don't forget that. I won't be bossed!"

There was no danger of her forgetting that fact, the wife mused bitterly.

"LOVE IS NOT LOVE THAT DIES"

By LILIAN LAUFERTY

LOVE begets love—so while you smiled
And gazed at me with longing in your eyes,
And all your warmth of tenderness for me,
I gave you love for love. Was it all lies?

And now you're gone should life seem empty quite?
I only regret to see an empty chair—
A place left empty in my heart—then lo
I close my heart to that and find I do not care.

Love begets love—but now 'tis gone
From out my life to memory I'd be true;
I'd still enshrine love in my heart of hearts,
Had I known love I'd give the past its due—

LOVE IS NOT LOVE THAT DIES,
I KNEW BUT VOWS—AND LIES,
IT WAS NOT LOVE I KNEW,
ALAS! 'TWAS ONLY YOU!

Dr. Parkhurst's Article —ON— New Haven R.R. Management—Latest Wreck Evidence Clearly Shows Road Has Been Conducted for Benefit of Stockholders to the Evident Disregard of the Lives of Its Patrons

Written for the Boston American by

DR. C. H. PARKHURST

THE general public has now the opportunity to get at the true inwardness of the New Haven situation.

The Federal Government, as represented by the Interstate Commerce Commission, and the State of Connecticut, represented by its Commission of Public Utilities, have been working in accord, and as the investigation has proceeded no intelligent person who has followed carefully, as he ought to have done, the published details of evidence furnished will fail of being convinced that the road has been worked with much more careful regard to the interests of the company than to the interests of the public, and also that the numerous disasters which have recently given unwholesome notoriety to the New Haven system are attributable much more to laxness and penuriousness of administration than to any inherent recklessness or unfaithfulness of employes.

There were rules and regulations enough, but they were indifferently enforced. Candidates for positions on the road were examined and then seem to have been left largely to do their business in their own way.

Running past warning signals was a common occurrence.

White Mountain Flyer Ran Nearly Mile a Minute in Fog

On the day of the North Haven disaster the six miles between Meriden and Wallingford, notwithstanding the fog, were covered in seven minutes (at the rate of fifty-one miles an hour—almost a mile a minute) by the wrecking White Mountain flyer.

The flagman who was sent back by the conductor of the wrecked Bar Harbor train to protect it while standing at North Haven, and whose duty it was to go back 2,000 feet, was called back by the conductor in two or three minutes, showing that it was not the conductor's expectation that the flagman would traverse any considerable portion of the required distance.

In order to do that, and be back at the time of the conductor's recall, he would have had to walk at the rate of nearly fifteen miles an hour.

That appears to be a fair sample of the hit-or-miss way in which things were done, and it was the product of that slipshod policy that cost the lives of twenty persons and the maiming of more than as many more.

The company has been economical in its use of steel cars, but prodigal in its destruction of life. It was generous, however, in furnishing special steel cars for the use of affluent clubmen of suburban towns, but used its old wooden ones of the kind splintered at North Haven for the conveyance of the common run of passengers.

Such are examples of the points brought out by the investigation of the Interstate Commerce Commission, and they will assuredly leave upon the mind of the careful and discerning reader the conviction that the criminality of New Haven disasters in general attaches primarily to the system—that is to say, to its administrative officers rather than to its employes—and that punishment, in order to be fair, satisfactory to justice and to the public, should be meted out, first of all, at the point of original guilt.

A policy of scapegoats whereby the original criminals escape and some helpless subordinate is scathed to salve the public sense of outrage is a mere apology of justice and morals, and there ought to be acumen enough in the legal profession to discover means by which a more honest result can be effected.

The Engineer or Flagman Should Not Be Made the Scapegoat

If the engineer or the flagman is guilty, he should be punished according to the extent of his guilt, but not punished in the capacity of scapegoat, not made to bear upon his own shoulders the sins primarily chargeable to the railroad corporation.

Justice becomes to the general mind a mere myth rather than a solid reality so long as a man's social or financial condition secures for him an application of justice more considerate, more temperate to his taste, than it does for one in a condition humbler or more impecunious.

And justice becomes to the general mind the same shadowy unreality when a number of people can combine into an organization of crime whose individual members become immune because the criminality is conceived of as being divided among so many that there is not guilt enough attaching to each to make him deserving of retribution.

The only equitable way of treating the matter is to regard corporate guilt as attaching in its entirety to each separate member of the corporation. It is not sound ethics to conceive of guilt as something which is divisible. The whole of it belongs to each of those participant in the crime.

Should Force Directors to Ride Cowcatcher of Engine

It is in keeping with that idea that the suggestion has been made that when a railroad company manages its affairs as the New Haven system has each member of the corporation should be provided with a seat on the cowcatcher, as it is said that in certain parts of China when a bank fails the heads of ALL the directors are lopped off and piled up with the assets.

The policy is a harsh one, as justice is always liable to be, but it brings great assurance to the hearts of the stockholders and depositors.

THE FOUR MILLION

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

THERE is a small Four Hundred, more or less,
Amusing folk who yearn to be amused;
They love their dinners and they love their dress;
Their minds are minor and their nerves abused.
Seldom they think. 'Tis easier to guess
As through their little lives they flit enthused.
Newport and nothing, froth and discontent—
It is not there that I would pitch my tent.

There is a great Four Million on an isle—
Four million beings milling to and fro;
The fathers sweat to make the babies smile,
And much they strive, and many things they know.
Few are their frolics, scant the hours they while,
But there is joy in watching something grow;
Nobly they toil, and gratefully they pray
To Him who rested on the Seventh Day.

The butterfly that basks upon a flower
Can never love a brother butterfly,
Alone it flits until its last brief hour;
Alone it looks its last on the blue sky.
I would not take a titled prince's power
To live serenely thus, and thus to die.
Of the Four Million ere my span is spent—
Yes, it is there that I would pitch my tent.
